Ruth Brown Snyder, "flapper wife out for a good time," and Henry Judd Gray, "the husband who basked in the seductive lure of other women's graces," stood at the bar of justice today to hear the court pronounce their day of doom. Then they go to Sing Sing prison to await execution in the electric chair for the murder of the woman's husband—from whom she got everything and gave naught but death and shame. Gray and Ruth hate each other. Once they loved—but it was a sinful love.

RUSSIA IS a country bigger than ours, and probably, at least, as rich in resources. But wealth means nothing unless you have men that know how to get it out, use it and multiply it. Remember that, if inclined to criticize the very rich.

The man who can say, "dig there, and you will find gold—or coal," is at least as important as the man that digs.

RUSSIA'S NATIONAL income for six months is $850,000,000. That would not be a financial flea bite in this favored land. We have the stuff in the ground, and the mines, and the men, machinery and brains that know how to get it out.

Russia will have them also, and when she gets rich, she will become conservative—that is how human nature works, from

LOS ANGELES HUNTS FOR LOST PLANE; WEATHER MAY DELAY OCEAN RACE

Lakehurst, N. J., May 13 (A. P.).—The Navy dirigible Los Angeles left its station here at 5:10 a. m. (daylight time) today on a training cruise along the Atlantic Coast, during which a close watch will be kept for possible trace of Nungesser and Coli, the missing French aviators.

A message to the Navy Department from the Los Angeles off Nantucket and received here shortly before noon, said the dirigible had encountered heavy fogs in that vicinity, adding that the visibility was

New York, May 13 (A.P.)—Three American planes slated for non-stop flights to Paris were berthed on Long Island flying fields today, and indications were that two of them at least would take off tomorrow morning in a race to be the first across the ocean if the weather permitted.

At Curtiss Field was the Bellanca monoplane "Columbia," in which Clarence Chamberlin and Lloyd Bertaud had hoped to hop off early this morning, but unfavorable weather reports caused them to decide on postponement until tomorrow morning.

BIG LAWYERS OPPOSE SACCO COMMISSION

In a statement to the people of Massachusetts, seven prominent lawyers today pointed out that such a commission of investigation as has been recommended in the Sacco-Vanzetti case would have no Constitutional foundation and could render no binding decision.

"Let the Governor alone; the responsibility is his and cannot be divided," was the substance of their message.

They explained that Governor Fuller might legally seek advice and information from any source, but "a commission would not have

SON KILLS HIS FATHER AND WOUNDS MOTHER

A seven-year quarrel between father and son ended today in Bromley park, Roxbury Crossing, with Salvatore Turco, Jr., shooting and killing his father and wounding his mother, Mrs. Graceflca Turco, so badly that she may die.

The younger Turco, following the shooting, fled through to Centre street, Jamaica Plain, and along Centre to Jackson square where two civilian pursuers captured him after a fierce battle in which a traffic officer joined.

Because of the inability of young Salvatore to speak but a few words of English, police had difficulty in piecing together the story of the killing, but gleaned from him at the Roxbury Crossing Station that his father had done injury to the son's wife seven years ago and

Washington, May 13 (I.N.S.).—A reward of $5,000 to any aviator who discovers the missing French fliers, Captains Nungesser and Coli, or their plane, the "White Bird," was offered today by Raymond Orteig, who put up the $25,000 prize for a non-stop New York-Paris flight.

Washington, May 13 (A.P.).—H. M. Blackmer, one of the long-sought witnesses in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case, has been found in France by American consular officers and served with a subpoena from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Trial of the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case was at once postponed in the District of Columbia Supreme Court from May 23 to October 17.

MRS. SNYDER CLINCHES FISTS, J[illegible]D IS TENSE; COUNSEL [illegible]LAN APPEAL

Queens County [illegible]ouse, New York, May 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. R[illegible]wn Snyder and Henry Judd Gray today were sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing the week of June 20 for the murder of Mrs. Snyder's husband, Albert Snyder, magazine art editor.

Neither defendant showed any emotion as Justice Townsend Scudder pronounced sentence. Mrs. Snyder was dressed in black, the same costume she wore during the trial. A matron stood on either side of her, but beyond a clasping and unclasp- of her hands, she did not show the strain.

Gray's figure was tense. He stood about five feet from his blonde co-defendant, but neither looked at the other.

Prior to imposition of sentence, counsel for Gray and Mrs Snyder made motions asking that the verdict be set aside. Justice Scudder denied the motions.

A crowd not nearly so large as the smallest to attend the trial was in the court room when sentence was imposed. There was no demonstration.

The voices of counsel and Justice Scudder could not be heard a few feet from the bench, the amplifiers used during the trial having been removed. The crowd did not know sentence had been passed until reporters rushed to their wires.

Neither Gray nor Mrs. Snyder replied when the clerk of courts asked

RICKARD PLANS ARENA ON NO. STATION SITE

By JACK CONWAY

New York, May 13.—Tex Rickard revealed to me today the fact that he has been asked to co-operate in planning the huge sporting arena which will be built on the present site of the North Station in Boston.

"The railroad station will be in the lower part of the building," said Tex. "It is then planned to erect a building along the lines of New Madison Square Garden. This will give a seating capacity of 18,000.

"The Boston people behind this great venture have asked for my co-operation in planning the building and I have gladly given it to them. I believe Boston has reached a point where it is prepared to promote big boxing matches indoors. A few years ago $200,000 gates at indoor boxing matches were merely a

Daring Riders of the Sky ~ Ready for Thrilling Overseas Dash ~ In Byrd's Powerful Airplane

GREAT PLANE IN WHICH COMMANDER BYRD WILL WING HIS WAY ACROSS ATLANTIC

"Here is the "America," one of three powerful planes being held in readiness for daring hop across the broad Atlantic in New York-to-Paris flight. It will be flown by Commander Richard E. Byrd, noted Polar explorer, and his intrepid flying mate, Bert Acosta. The plane is the biggest of those in the thrilling overseas race. It is "tuned up" and conditioned for immediate flight. The two other planes—"Columbia" and "Spirit of St. Louis"—are expected to get away in the long, perilous trip by tomorrow. Commander Byrd has not announced any definite time for his departure from Roosevelt Field base.

"very low and the ocean's surface was totally obscure."

Later the dirigible reported that it was thirty-five miles off Nantucket and heading back toward land. At that time the visibility was reported as "good."

The message added that the Los Angeles would continue its search for the missing French plane while in New England waters.

An earlier message said the big dirigible was one mile north of Nantucket Lightship and heading northward toward Phelps Bank and Davis Bank.

Phelps Bank and Davis Bank are in the easterly direction from Nantucket light.

The ship was in charge of Commander C. E. Rosendahl, and carried a crew of 39 officers and men. Commander Rosendahl said his course would be northeast and east, and that he planned to stay in the air as long as visibility continued, probably until night.

Washington, May 13 (A.P.).—The feasibility of sending the dirigible Los Angeles as far north as the coast of Labrador in search of the missing French fliers was taken under consideration today by the Navy.

New Hope for Lost Fliers as Hunt Is Continued

New York, May 13 (A.P.)—A thorough search of wild and rocky areas of the extreme northeastern Atlantic coast was under way today for Captains Nungesser and Coli as new reports bolstered the theory that their lost biplane passed over the fog-covered region last Monday morning.

Support to the belief that the French aviators reached the Atlantic coast was seen in the report of two lobster fishermen that an unidentified plane had passed over St. Mary's Bay, N. S., early last Monday morning.

Previous reports from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, were that six persons there had heard an airplane pass over that town the same morning.

Although Harbor Grace and St. Mary's Bay are more than six hundred miles apart, the organized search by radio, ships and airplanes was given new impetus, as Newfoundland and the maritime provinces are in the path laid out by Captain Nungesser before he hopped off Sunday on his 3,800-mile flight for New York.

Supporting the belief that the missing airmen may be found in some isolated point in the northeastern part of the continent, American naval hydrographers expressed the theory that if the fliers are alive they are probably in Labrador.

May Be Lost in Wilds

Noting the possibility that the aviators may be found somewhere in the vast wastelands of the region, authorities point out that difficulties of fast communication in the isolated sections of the country may delay word of their safety for weeks, perhaps months.

The lobster fishermen at St. Mary's Bay told newspapermen the plane they saw was heading in a westerly direction across the mouth of the Bay of Fundy, between 9 and 10 a. m. Atlantic time.

They offered the information on learning for the first time of the search being made for the missing fliers.

The belief that some densely wooded and mountainous section of Labrador may hold the secret of the lost "White Bird" was based by hydrographers on the assumption that the plane's motor had no trouble, that the wind velocity took the aviators to the north of Newfoundland and that the machine's altimeter saved them from collision with icebergs and land obstructions.

If the machine did not reach the Labrador coast, hydrographers said, there was little chance that the plane would remain afloat at sea.

Victims of the Fog

Naval officials based their statement on the assumption that Nungesser and Coli, halted by fog in their southerly course, had turned further north across Newfoundland and away from the ice floes and rugged land in the northern part of the region.

Nungesser planned to change his course if weather conditions interfered with flying on a southerly route, and, authorities say, he may have headed inland toward the St. Lawrence River, which he was expected to have followed as far as Montreal, where the flight was to turn toward New York.

The airmen may have veered away from Belle Isle Straight and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, authorities said, and continued into Lower Labrador.

The hydrographers' report to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur said that in the darkness they probably were not expecting to sight land so early and might have passed over the coast line and proceeded inland without knowing it.

If this happened, the experts asserted, the airmen may have been forced down by bad weather or crashed into the side of a mountain. A landing in one of the many lakes in the Labrador interior was cited as the "best chance of survival" for the pair.

LONE FLIER

"FLYING FOOL"

Capt. Charles Lindbergh, lone sky mariner, who broke all records in his 2600-mile dash across the continent, plans to hop alone for Paris tomorrow.

Lindbergh's Career Full of Thrills

New York, May 12.—Into the lonely Atlantic sky a 25-year-old "flying fool" from out of the West will dip his nose in a valiant effort to conquer the elements, which, it seems, have claimed the lives of Captains Nungesser and Coli.

Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, who nonchalantly flew from San Diego to St. Louis and then on to Curtiss Field, is "going to fly the Atlantic as though it were my regular mail run."

"Oh, I don't see why such a fuss should be made over it," Captain Lindbergh said in an exclusive interview. "We must all appreciate the fact that aviation, like all great sciences, must be founded upon those who are willing to take a chance.

PLAN 36-HOUR FLIGHT.

"I know the Atlantic is a big span of water and I know there are dangers in the air. I am going to look upon it as though it were my regular air mail run from St. Louis to Chicago.

"If I didn't have every confidence in the world that I would land in Paris thirty-six hours after I leave New York I wouldn't try.

Lindbergh—they call him Charlie—became interested in aviation in 1922, when he was a student at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. He was then taking a mechanical engineering course.

It was on a day in March when Charlie, at the age of twenty, beheld a tiny speck in the sky above the campus, and then was born an undaunted love for the ships that sail the air.

"I wanted to become an aviator. Looked like a good job to me.

"I went to Lincoln, Neb., in April, 1922, and took a commercial course in flying at Nebraska Aircraft School. Later I went to Kelly Field at San Antonio, Texas, where I received my ground school training."

During the following year Charlie was a "barnstormer of the air."

JUMPS TO SAFETY.

He then joined the Contract Air Mail No. 2, plying the air between St. Louis and Chicago. He remained with this company for a year and a half, leaving them last Fall to perfect his plans for the trans-Atlantic flight—the flight on which he stakes all—including life.

In a test flight in St. Louis, on June 2, 1925, Lindbergh shot his plane into a tail spin from which he was unable to recover. The plane crashed to the earth. At an altitude of only 350 feet, Lindbergh jumped to safety in a parachute.

Twice while carrying mail from St. Louis to Chicago this flying fool struck storms. Each time he jumped, unscratched, to safety.

"But all of these accidents were unavoidable," Lindbergh pointed out. If I had been carrying passengers, I would not have flown my plane through that weather or taken the other unnecessary chances."

Lindbergh received his grammar school education from schools scattered throughout fourteen different towns. However, most of his boyhood was spent in Little Falls, Minn., Los Angeles, Washington, D. C., and Detroit.

After entering the mail service, the young flyer made his home in St. Louis, the town after which his transatlantic plane has been christened "The Spirit of St. Louis."

U. S. Hopes Fliers Safe, Coolidge Wires France

Washington, May 13 (A.P.).—President Coolidge today sent a message to President Doumergue of France expressing the hope that the two French aviators, Nungesser and Coli, would be found and assuring France that the American government would do everything "humanely possible" in the search for them.

FORCES FOR WAR GAME GATHER AT NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., May 13 (I.N.S.)—The island of Rhode Island today took on the appearance of wartime, as the advance guard of the big Black and Blue war game forces began to gather.

Twenty-two seaplanes from Norfolk took trial flights over the city. The U. S. S. Patoka, mast ship of the dirigible Los Angeles, anchored off this port with twelve planes aboard.

The U. S. S. Wright, naval airship "mother" ship, was also in port. An air base was being set up in Middletown.

On Monday a fleet of 137 battleships and smaller naval craft, known as the "Black" invaders, will launch at attack against the "Blue" defenders.

RUM-RUNNER'S AUTO INSURANCE CANCELED

The board of appeal under the compulsory automobile insurance law today sustained the cancellation of the insurance policy of Domenico Latanzio, Linwood street, Somerville, at a hearing today after Latanzio had admitted connection with the manufacture and transportation of liquor.

Latanzio must now either take his car off the road or get another company to carry his insurance. The Globe Indemnity Company refuses to carry him further.

DARING FLIERS AWAIT CLEAR SKIES FOR DASH OVER SEAS

were not favorable this afternoon. Unless it clears the scheduled start of the waiting planes will probably be potponed until Sunday.

Beside the Bellanca plane was the Ryan single seater monoplane, "the spirit of St. Louis," in which Captain Charles Lindbergh flew from San Diego, Cal., in two days preparatory to a flight to France which may now develop into a race with the Bellanca.

And at Roosevelt field was the Fokker monoplane "America," sent over from Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., last night for the flight of Commander Richard E. Byrd.

This flight is to be postponed, however, until the fate of the missing French fliers, Nungesser and Coli, is determined and until Byrd has recovered from a broken wrist injured during a test flight.

The "America" still has several days of testing before it can be pronounced fit for service.

Glad Jinx Day Avoided

Although regret was expressed in many quarters that the Bellanca fliers had been able to get off this morning as they had expected, the superstitious breathed a sigh of relief when it was finally decided that none of the flights was to be begun on "Black Friday."

Chamberlin and Bertaud now plan to hop off at 1 o'clock tomorrow morning if conditions allow, and it was generally believed that Lindbergh would be tarting at almost the same hour, although he was non-committal as to his plans.

With the Bellanca hop off set for this morning if weather proved propitious, excitement ran high across the closely grouped Long Island flying fields all day yesterday but the high point of the day was when Lindbergh, a blonde young giant, a former air mail pilot, dropped out of the sky after his record rush across the Continent.

His time was the quickest ever made from coast to coast and it was the first time a pilot had flown such a distance alone.

Lindbergh a Hero

Lindbergh's time from San Diego to St. Louis, about 1,600 miles, was 14 hours, 5 minutes, and from St. Louis to New York, about 950 miles, 7 hours and 15 minutes.

The time made by Lieutenants Kelly and Macready in their non-stop, cross-continent flight in 1923 was 26 hours, 50 minutes.

So great was the admiration roused by his two great hops across the country that the crowd at Curtiss Field would not have been greatly surprised to see him fill up his tank and start right out for Paris. Several persons actually shouted the question whether he was going on as he claimed from the cockpit of his plane.

"No," Lindbergh replied, taking the question as seriously as it was meant. "I don't feel just like setting off on a 35 or 36 hour hop right now."

He showed no signs of fatigue, however, and his plane wheeled into position under lights in a hangar so that he could go over it. Then he strolled about, chatting with Chamberlin, Bertaud, Byrd and others, and did not retire until after midnight.

Chamberlin and Bertaud have announced they will not let anyone get ahead of them, but Lindbergh did not indicate he was especially anxious to start ahead of them or even at the same time.

It was generally believed, however, that the takeoff of the two planes will be almost simultaneous, and that both will be launched just as soon as the weather bureau says conditions are good.

Squalls Along Route

The special weather report was not received by the Bellanca fliers last night until a few minutes after 11. It reported there still were numerous squalls in the region which would have to be traversed on the first half of the journey to France.

A conference of the Bellanca pilots and their sponsors was called, and after half an hour's earnest discussion the decision was reached to postpone the attempt until 1 o'clock Saturday or the first day thereafter on which the weather is favorable.

Of all those now preparing to fly from New York to Paris, Lindbergh is the only one who is properly entered for the Orteig prize. One of the conditions for winning the prize is that application must be made 60 days in advance and a bond posted at that time. This Lindenbergh did.

Chamberlin and Bertaud only entered their application a few days ago, so even if they were successful the prize could only be awarded them if the 60-day clause were waived.

Byrd Not After Prize

At the flying fields it was generally believed that in the event of a race, even though the single-seater should actually lose, it would be awarded the prize, as being the only one properly entered. Should Lindbergh fail, however, and Chamberlain and Bertaud succeed, all felt confident that the prize would be awarded the Bellanca.

Commander Byrd has made no application for the Orteig prize. His financial backers announce that this flight will be conducted purely for scientific reasons and with no hope of prize money.

TIE UP WATCHMAN AND BREAK OPEN THREE SAFES

Pawtucket, May 13 (A.P.).—Safe crackers raided the office of the Solway Dyeing and Textile Company here today, tied up Michael Lennon, the watchman, and smashed three safes open with sledge hammers. They escaped, with several hundred dollars in cash. Today is pay day at the plant, but the payroll had not been made up.

It is understood there were three or four men in the gang. Lennon freed himself after two hours and notified the police.

BOSTON NAVAL SHIPS TO END FLIER HUNT

By nightfall all Navy and Coast Guard craft running out of the Boston area that are now scouring the seas for the missing airmen, Captains Nungesser and Coli, will be ordered to return to their respective bases, according to reports prevalent at the Boston Navy Yard this afternoon.

The sea-going tug Wandank, which has been scouring the seas since a few hours after it was established that the flyers had failed, is proceeding toward shore. The other vessels scattered along the coast and as far away as mid-ocean will also give up the search by dark.

The calling off of the naval and coast guard craft from the search does not mean, however, that search for the missing flyers has been entirely abandoned. The search over the mountains and lakes of Newfoundland will be continued indefinitely.

Chiefs of the United States Navy and Coast Guard agreed today that if Nungesser and Coli were forced to land on the surface of the Atlantic they are lost unless they have been picked up by a passing vessel. They agree that the frail shell of the plane's fuselage could not have withstood the battering seas for this length of time.

DRIVER, SAVED FROM MOB, IS FINED $175

James F. Preston of East Boston, who, two weeks ago, was rescued by two marines from an angry mob after his car had run down Mrs. Fanny Bornstein in front of the Chelsea Naval Hospital, was found guilty of five charges growing out of the accident in Chelsea district court today.

On the charge of driving a car while intoxicated Preston was fined $100; on the charge of driving a car after his operator's license had been revoked he was fined $50; on the charge of driving so as to endanger the lives of the public he was fined $25, but this fine was suspended. The charges of being drunk and of driving a car without a proper license were placed on file.

Judge George F. Stearns was in a lenient mood. He continued the final disposition of the case until June 3 to give Preston an opportunity to raise the money to pay his fines.

PLAY "MOTHER MACHREE" AT ERNEST BALL'S BURIAL

Cleveland, May 13 (A.P.).—His own composition, "Mother Machree," was one of three musical selections for the burial here today of Ernest Ball, composer, who died recently in Los Angeles.

Ball's boyhood friends, leading musicians of the city, formed a string quartet and were made pallbearers. His mother, Mrs. Nanie Ball, said to have inspired "Mother Machree," accompanied the body from New York, where the funeral was held yesterday.

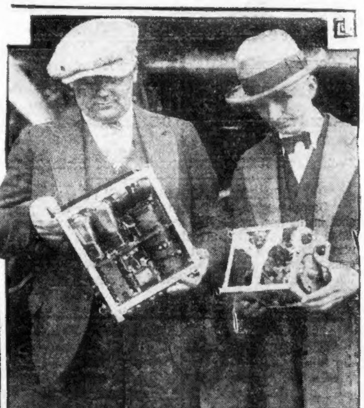
SET FOR PARIS SKY DASH

"SPIRIT OF ST. LOUIS" TO BE WAFTED ACROSS THE SEA

Crowds on Curtis Field welcoming Lindbergh, "the flying fool," who alone will dare the perils of the sky and the sea in his heroic flight for Paris in his single-seat Ryan monoplane. He will race Bertaud and Chamberlin to the other side. He is the first lone flier to hop such a distance and his time across the continent was the best ever made—totalling 21 hours and 20 minutes. He hopes to make Paris in 35 hours.

MAKING AIR HISTORY FOR TIME

The Bellanca plane, "Columbia," in which Bertaud and Chamberlin will make their dash for Paris, is shown here as she broke all non-stop endurance records by flying over New York for more than 50 hours. Paris is her next stop.



SEEING THAT THE RADIO IS O. K.

Lloyd Bertaud, navigator, and Clarence Chamberlin, pilot, of the "Columbia," who will hop Saturday in the race with Lindbergh for Paris, are shown here examining the radio they will have aboard.

In the old coach that once was a vehicle for Charles Dickens, John Cumberland, in his costume of "Mr. Pickwick," now playing at a Boston theatre, drove about town, calling on officials and friends. It was the famous character's 100th birthday.

ONLY A 'STRAY MONGREL,' BUT HE LOVED CHILDREN

A dog that played with children, t snapped angrily at grown-ups in e vicinity of Arnold street, Revere, ied for this offense with a policeman's bullet in his head.

It was just a mongrel. Once it as probably somebody's pet, but at somebody had tired of it, and it was roaming the streets with-ut a collar, just a "mongrel stray." Perhaps it had been taught to uard children against strangers. hat is what a patrolman thought hen he hurried to the scene in response to a complaint from one of he grown-ups. The policeman ound the children circled about the dog and playing, and he returned to the station and reported "everything O. K."

But came the complaint a second time and another policeman was sent to Arnold street, and he found the dog and the children playing as did his brother officer. But true enough, the dog did snap at grown-ups who went near and this was alarming the parents, and seeing the dog was only a "stray," he put a bullet in its head.

ALSO THREAT OF BENTLEY TO 'FIX HER'

A "silence strike" was one of the cruelties John M. Bentley imposed on his wife, Mrs. Edna W. Bentley, according to testimony offered today in the East Cambridge Probate Court, where she is seeking a divorce.

Mrs. Bentley charges that in the six years she lived with her husband her weight was reduced from more than 100 pounds to 83 pounds. The husband has a counter-action pending for desertion.

The "silence strike" was described by Mrs. Grace A. Noyes of Newton, a sister of Mrs. Bentley. She declared there were several periods during which Bentley did not speak to his wife. They greeted each other with silence when Bentley arrived home. They remained silent during the hours they were together and when Bentley left for business they were still mute, Mrs. Noyes testified.

Mrs. Noyes also told of hearing the Bentleys arguing outside her bedroom door over money, and Mrs. Bentley finally ran from the house, while the Tufts graduate shouted after her he would "fix her" if she spent the money.

VACARRO TELLS WHY HE SHOT GERARDI

Over the opposition of government counsel, Attorney William H. Lewis, defending Daniel Gerardi on drug charges in Federal Court, gained the admission from Sarro Vacarro, government narcotic informer, that he shot Gerardi in Medford April 26.

Details of the shooting had heretofore been kept secret by the Federal narcotic squad.

Gerardi is on trial before Judge James M. Morton and a jury on an indictment in five counts charging possession and sale of morphine.

Vacarro, sworn as a government witness, was called to the stand by Lewis to explain the motives which actuated him in firing the shot which hit Gerardi in the heel.

Vacarro testified he fired because Gerardi attempted to escape arrest and said although the night was dark he was a good enough shot to maim the prisoner in the heel.

The witness declined to admit when shown Gerardi's bullet-bored shoe that it was evidence of a downward revolver shot at close quarters.

After aligning Vacarro and Gerardi before the jury to compare their physical appearance, Attorney Lewis asked the government informer if "that little toothpick, the prisoner at the bar," hit him with such force in the face as to throw him to the ground.

Vacarro had previously testified Gerardi had struck him before attempting his getaway.

CITY'S HEALTH IMPERILED, MAYOR SAYS

Declaring that the City Council committee on appropriations in cutting some $5,000 from the health department's budget was taking a dangerous and ill-conceived step, affecting directly the health and welfare of the city, Mayor Nichols today launched a violent attack against the proposed slicing of the municipal budget by some $220,000.

The mayor took the committee to task for removing from the budget all emergency appropriations covering snow removal work in the closing months of this year.

He says: "I am informed that the committee are of the opinion that our city will not be visited this year by any more snowstorms and consequently no emergency appropriation is necessary. In view of the happenings of the last two Winters they must be brave men indeed who will dare to predict so many months in advance what the actual conduct of a New England Winter will be."

He takes the committee to task for their cutting the appropriation of $50,000 for new street signs to $25,000 stating that it sets the city back one year in the equipment of

'DOT' DOES NOT KNOW WHERE SHE WED

Los Angeles, May 13 (A.P.)—Miss Dorothy Mackaye was informed today that press dispatches reported there was no place in Maryland by the name of "Gretna Green," at which she testified she was married to Ray Raymond on August 1, 1921.

"I was informed that was the name of the place," she said.

"What town was it near?"

"I don't know."

"Was it out of Baltimore?"

"Yes, it was; we motored out."

"How long a ride?"

"Oh, I don't know, an hour, an hour and a half or two hours."

"Were you married by a clergyman?"

"No, it was a justice of the peace."

Pressed for more definite identity of the town she said:

"I don't know any more. I'm sorry I can't help you."

Miss Mackaye admitted from the witness stand in the trial of Paul Kelly for her husband's murder that she had heard Raymond order Kelly from their home. She denied she heard Kelly tell Raymond the order was because Kelly was in love with her, Mrs. Raymond.

Miss Mackaye at first was controlled but under the rapid fire questioning of Assistant Prosecutor George Kemp she fidgeted and groped for replies. During a brief let-up in the questioning she bit her lips and appeared ready to cry.

The couple will reside in Fitchburg. Mr. Damon is a construction engineer.

Lindbergh Is Rarin' to Hop Off for Paris

New York, May 13 (A.P.)—The Spirit of St. Louis, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic plane is manned by the spirit of American youth.

Slightly shy, this young pilot countered the questions of many reporters with answers that were often half joking and non-committal, but in keeping with the spirit of accomplishment behind the amazing flights which brought him here last night in two hops across the continent.

Stepping out of his plane, this pink-cheeked, blue-eyed youth caused the first gasp of amazement. The second came at his natty appearance. His white collar and flying uniform were unspotted by a single mark of work. The third surprise came when his plane was wheeled into a hangar. He examined the place quickly and asked:

"Aren't there any lights in this hangar?"

"Oh, no."

"Well, I'd like one with lights, if you have it. I intend to work on the plane most of tonight."

A little later this boy, who had flown all one night from San Diego, then taken a few hours' sleep in St. Louis and flown to New York was asked whether it could be possible for him to start nearly 40 hours trans-Atlantic vigil without further rest, and he grinned:

"All I need is a couple of hours' sleep and I'll be ready to go."

Another smiling remark, made in the face of the threat which North Atlantic weather holds for airmen was:

"The weather doesn't mean everything to me. If it is not absolutely terrible I will fly when I get ready."

While Lindbergh stood beside Clarence Chamberlin of the rival Bellanca someone exclaimed:

"May the best man win," Lindbergh smiled at Chamberlin with:

"I guess that goes both ways."

Pressed for a statement whether he intended to start "right away," the youth said:

"No, I don't feel just like starting a 35 or 36-hour hop right away."

BAY STATE WIFE GETS DIVORCE IN PARIS

PLANES IN SEA RACE ALL VARY IN DESIGN

New York, May 13 (A. P.)—Considerable variation exists in design, size and equipment in the three planes now poised on Long Island flying fields for proposed non-stop flights to Paris.

About the only points of similarity among the Bellanca entry "Columbia," the Ryan plane "Spirit of St. Louis" and the Fokker "America" are that all are monoplanes and are equipped with Wright whirlwind motors, and the "America" has three of these while each of the others have only one.

The Fokker plane, in which Commander Richard E. Byrd plans the crossing, is by far the largest. It is of wood and cloth construction, 48 feet long, with a wing spread of 71 feet and will carry nearly 1,300 gallons of gasoline.

Its cabin has room for three persons as well as observation instruments, radio and reserve supplies. It carries a collapsible boat and other safety devices.

The "Columbia," in which Bert Acosta and Clarence Chamberlin established a new record for sustained flight and in which Chamberlin and Lloyd Bertaud expect to hop across the ocean, is the lighest of the three, weighing 1,850 pounds.

It is 26 feet, 6 inches long and has a wing spread of 46 feet, 6 inches.

U. S. Ocean Fliers Will Be Guarded for 1,200 Miles

Washington, May 13 (I.N.S.).—Elaborate preparations have been made by the Coast Guard to protect and guide the American aviators who are planning to hop off shortly on non-stop flights to Paris, it was announced today.

A mixed detachment of aircraft, cutters and destroyers will be strung out to sea for 1,200 miles, about one-third of the distance to Paris.

Officials said that the first part of the long hop was the most dangerous, and if the flyers get past the Grand Banks their chances for success will be exceedingly favorable.

WIVES OF OCEAN FLIERS SCOFF AT 'DANGERS'

New York, May 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Clarence D. Chamberlin, whose husband will pilot the Bellanca monoplane on the New York-Paris flight, and Mrs. Lloyd W. Bertaud, wife of the plane's navigator, have become accustomed to looking danger in the face.

Like the Bellanca birdmen, neither woman suffers any undue apprehension as the hour for the take-off of the Columbia in the race to Paris draws near.

"We are not at all fearful for the success of the flight," Mrs. Chamberlain said. "I have the utmost confidence in the Columbia and feel that she will arrive safely at the goal. Not long ago I went along on a test flight in the Columbia.

"I can visualize how she will wing her way across the Atlantic, her engines in perfect tune. Knowing what the plane can do, and what can be expected in case of emergency, I am not worrying."

FAITH IN HUSBAND.

She lifted her head proudly and smiled.

"I have supreme faith in my husband's ability to pilot her through and in Lieutenant Bertaud's skill as a navigator. There is nothing to fear, nothing at all.

"How shall I pass my time from the time the Columbia takes off until we get word that Paris is won? Doing the usual things I would do were Mr. Chamberlin flying at home. My duties and the interesting business of running a home are sufficient to keep me busy. Then, knowing what flying entails in a good plane, my imagination will not run riot and set me to imagining all sorts of terrible things. The radio will bring news.

FLYING NOT DANGEROUS.

"Having been a flier's wife for eight years, I do not feel that aviation is the most dangerous or unfortunate of professions," Mrs. Chamberlin gayly confessed. "I'd rather be the wife of a flier than the wife of a golf fan, a reporter or any number of professions I can think of.

"Aviation is scarcely more dangerous than motoring. Flying seems as natural as any other means of locomotion. It is no more revolutionary to fly to one's destination than to take a train or a motor."

Nungesser's First Big Air Triumph in War

Thrills aplenty are contained in this story of adventure, written by Captain Charles Nungesser, some time before he started on his trans-Atlantic flight. The third installment, detailing the French aviator's own adventures in the World War, follows:

By CAPTAIN CHARLES NUNGESSER.

On the night of May 25, Ponchon went up in the air with me on one of my most thrilling flights. Our objective was Douai.

Not a light was allowed in the city, but we knew where to find it.

We gradually ascended to a height of 5,000 feet, plunging through a very thick cloud bank of rarer altitudes.

Here a deathly silence prevailed. The moon, like a brilliant electric arc, glared down from a broad expanse of pale blue and the clouds below had every appearance of a billowly sea. There was no wind. The mercury in the thermometer fell almost to zero, but we were warmly clad.

The champion German airmen, particularly Immelmann and Boelke, had a sneaky habit of hiding in the clouds, then pouncing down unexpectedly upon any unlucky allied aeronaut who happened to venture into the sky below them.

Familiar with some of their habits, Ponchon and I maintained keen lookout for those devils, but saw no signs of danger.

WRECKS WAREHOUSES

In a few minutes my mechanic, with binoculars at his eyes, announced that the Douai railroad station lay directly beneath us. As I took the glasses I observed a cluster of large warehouses close to the station.

"Storehouses for the Boche's supplies," I announced grimly.

"They might be better off the map than on it," answered Ponchon.

His words thrilled me. I swept the plane straight over them, and when sure of my mark, I pulled the wire holding the bombs, and let two drop. The plane was kept moving in a circle so I could note the result for my report to headquarters.

Two dull intonations succeeded the impact, followed by a mass of debris spurting into the air. I then steered the plane back to the same spot, and sent down the other two missles of destruction. This time the walls of the warehouses pitched outward, there was a flare of fire and smoke, and two explosions like rumbling thunder.

In a moment more the warehouses, or rather what was left of them, burst into flames that soon lit up the surroundings for a mile in all directions, exposing the enemy's positions. That gave the French gunners a chance to pour in a heavy barrage, and advance their lines.

We could see the dim, shadowy figures of soldiers running wildly across no man's land and German hordes swarming up the hills behind their lines.

IN DEATH-TRAP

It was quite dark where we now hung underneath the clouds, to where I had dropped the plane after the first shot, and we felt safe from observation. But the Germans knew that those deadly shells had come from the sky, and had sent up several scout planes to locate us for the bombers and battle planes.

Our sense of security was suddenly dispelled when two powerful searchlights burst into a glow and the huge rays began to sweep the sky in all directions. We could see them gliding along the clouds coming our way, until at length they were close by.

We had no time to dive into the cloud before the lights touched us and we were seen. To make matters worse, one of our rudder lines became jammed, so I could not ascend, and we were compelled to remain where we were or land.

It was clear that we would have to pay for our recklessness with our lives if their guns and airmen happened to reach us. I figured that

MOTHER OF 8 SAYS HUSBAND SHOT AT HER

Brockton, May 13.—When the staccato bark of a pistol shot aroused neighbors of Mrs. Lucy Barrett, mother of eight children, early today, they rushed to her room and found her and one child cowering in a corner there and pointing to a window, through which she charges her husband had just fled.

Police of Cambridge are watching the house that the husband, Francis J. Barrett, occupies in that city, while local police are guarding Mrs. Barrett in her home in Provost street here, and State Constabulary officers are scouring surrounding towns for the man.

The Barretts are estranged. The wife is 29 years old and had six children by her first husband, a man named White. Barrett was chauffeur for the Whites, according to the police, and when his boss died, he married the widow. He is 26 years old.

Mystery surrounds the shooting, the police reconstruction of it differing from the story later told by Mrs. Barrett.

Police believe that Barrett, coming here to settle the protracted quarrel, broke a window in trying to enter the room and discharged the gun, probably accidentally. The bullet buried itself in the wall as the mother and child screamed in terror.

The wife's story, told later, is that her husband entered the room and drew the pistol, threatening "to end everything." After a wordy argument, he said he would shoot himself anyway, according to her story, and fired, falling on his face on the floor.

But when she went to aid him, she declared, he leaped to his feet and manhandled her until, fearing that her screams would bring help, he fled through the window, breaking it in his haste to escape.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY IN IRELAND TO STAY DRY

Dublin, Ireland, May 13 (A.P.).—St. Patrick's Day seems likely to continue to be bone dry in the Free State. Both houses of Parliament have rejected a proposal to permit licensed public houses to operate on the seventeenth of March on the same scale as on Sundays, although the scheme had the approval of the liquor commission.

John Daly, Laborite, speaking in favor of the measure, declared St. Patrick's Day was a day of joy and should be treated as such. Connor Hogan, farmers' representative, saw in a dry St. Patrick's Day the first step toward prohibition, which he said had had such serious consequences on America.

NAMED TO COMMAND OF LAKE DRY FLEET

St. Albans, Vt., May 13 (A.P.).—Deputy Collector and Inspector John B. Kendrick of this city has been named to the command of the customs lake fleet of three rum patrol boats with headquarters here. A new speed boat will shortly be added to the fleet. Other "dry navy" personnel assignments will be made in a few days.

RUTH AND JUDD DOOMED TO DIE ON JUNE 20

if they had anything to say as to why sentence should not be imposed. Attorneys said that the defendants had "nothing to say at this time."

Appeals from the sentences are contemplated. These will be made direct to the Court of Appeals instead of to the Appellate Court as is provided by law in cases of death penalties.

Court attaches said Mrs. Snyder and Gray would be taken to Sing Sing Monday.

Counsel for Gray denied reports that Gray had asked the privilege of saying good-bye to his former sweetheart.

Jail attendants quoted him as saying he "wanted only to see her in heaven."

Court attaches later said Mrs. Snyder and Gray will be taken to Sing Sing next Monday.

Sentence was pronounced first on Mrs. Snyder. The Queens Village housewife, her blonde hair exposed beneath her black hat, bowed her head. Her corset salesman suitor stood erect, looking squarely at Justice Scudder.

Through a misunderstanding sentence was but half pronounced on Gray before his counsel had concluded motions. Justice Scudder reread the whole sentence when the motions were finished.

When the sentencing was ended, Gray and Mrs. Snyder were taken, one at a time, to their separate cells.

Mrs. Snyder's appearance did not support reports that she had been ill since the verdict. She was no paler than during the trial and she walked as firmly as when she took the stand to place the crime on Gray's shoulders.

Although there was no alternative for Justice Scudder, and it was known the death sentence would be imposed, a crowd collected in front of the courthouse and there awaited news of the sentences. When told the date of execution the crowd silently dispersed.

The murder of Mrs. Snyder's husband on the night of March 19 was described by District Attorney Richard Newcombe as "the most brutal in the history of New York."

Snyder was hit on the head with a sashweight, chloroformed, then strangled with picture wire. Mrs. Snyder said Gray did the killing, but Gray said they did the crime together.

Gray of Ashen Face, But Ruth Flashes Fire

By MARGERY REX

Courthouse, Long Island City, N. Y., May 13.—Ruth Snyder, at first glance better looking than ever before, her cheeks powdered, and rouged, her eyes alight, stands before the court. Her mouth, however, bitter and twisted, is telltale for her thoughts. It has new lines, deeper, darker lines about it. She seems to have aged even in the last few days.

Gray is ashen, pinched in, his dark eyes are like holes in the thin face, they turn pleadingly up to the high lamps that hang above the judge's bench.

Millard, for Gray, moves for a new trial. What Ruth must be thinking if Judd should wriggle out of it after all, a flash of hate on her face, her cheeks ablaze.

The judge's voice is low.

"Until at least Monday," court grants Judd permission to linger a bit in the Long Island City jail.

Ruth, too, will not ride today on the riverbanks.

"Keep up your courage," Millard whispers to Gray. Judd hangs a smile.

Mrs. Irene Wolfe and Mrs. Nana Hart, all ready for the ride up the river, stood at either side of Ruth.

Ruth bows her head while her counsel, Hazleton, in hushed voice, reads motions.

GLANCES AT JUDD.

Ruth steals glances at Judd continually; he never looks at her, but he seems conscious of her scrutiny.

Overruled, says the court.

Ruth looks up a "how could you, your honor." She looks down again.

"Nothing to say"—counsel answers for her. The iced woman is frozen again.

Ruth's hard mouth gives up to one, only one, nervous twist as she hears of "solitary confinement," "some day in the week beginning June 20" —that she must "be executed."

Court seats are filled. No disorder. The atmosphere at 9:30 had not yet grown tense. It seems as though the spectators had taken on the mood of resignation that envelopes the defendant Gray.

Quiet, like the chill of the death house, has settled over the big hall of justice. There is little conversation, everyone feels the horror of the woman's fate, feels her doom to be more deadly than Gray's since only angry resentment possesses her soul, while Gray talks of peace with God.

NO MORE SILK.

Many standing in the back of the aisles, more excitement now.

Ruth in her cell, putting on the silk for the last time. The silk stockings, silk coat, the last day silk will touch her white skin, now to wear the cotton of penal repentance, cotton for the solitary confinement of the cell at Sing Sing.

Many women have committed crimes with the result of changing cotton for silk, but the enormity of Ruth Snyder's act robs her of silk and puts texture next to her as rough as her own purposes.

Mrs. Josephine Brown, Ruth's mother, and her brother, came to the jail for a farewell, and left before 9:30, the aged woman to the mending-baskets that helps time pass, and the brother to the "man of the house" in his pretty suburban cottage on 222nd street.

Ruth to Never See Her "Baby" Girl, Lorraine, Again

Long Island City, N. Y., May 13 (I.N.S.).—After his conference in the jail with Mrs. Ruth Snyder, sentenced today to die in the electric chair on June 20, Attorney Hazelton, her chief counsel, told newspapermen that nine-year-old Lorraine Snyder will never see her mother again.

"It is best for mother and daughter that they do not meet again," he said.

Judge Scudder Opposed to Capital Punishment

Long Island City, N. Y., May 13 (I.N.S.).—Justice Townsend Scudder is opposed to capital punishment "in any form," he asserted today after he sentenced Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray to die.

"But," he added, "if the wisdom of the people demands capital punishment I believe the execution should follow more closely on the verdict than it does in this country."

RUTH SNYDER LAUGHS, JOKES ABOUT FATE

Long Island City, N. Y., May 13 (I.N.S.).—Attendants said Mrs. Ruth Snyder laughed and joked with the matrons as she waited today to be called into the courtroom to be sentenced to death in the electric chair, and that Attorney Hazelton was compelled to warn her to be more serious.

As she stood before the judge, Mrs. Irene Wolfe, matron, put an arm around Mrs. Snyder's waist to support her. Mrs. Wolfe later remarked there was no need of such precaution.

Attorney Hazelton conferred with her in jail after sentence. She was in good spirits, according to attendants, and confident she would never go to the electric chair.

"This is only a formality," they quoted her as saying. "I have just as good a chance now of going free as I had before the trial started."

Before going into court she showed her vanity by washing and arranging her hair and polishing her nails.

John Moran, clerk of the court, turned to her and asked:

"Have you anything to say before sentence of this court is passed upon you?"

She did not reply but turned to her attorney, who stood nearby.

Then came the fatal words.

50 BROCKTON CARPENTERS STRIKE FOR 40-HOUR WEEK

Brockton, May 13 (A.P.)—About 50 carpenters are on strike here today because employers failed to agree to a 40-hour week and an increase from $1.10 to $1.25 an hour. Employers are willing to grant the wage increase, but balk on a 40-hour week, which means that there will be no work on Saturdays.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY EVENTS

Children's Events to Be Featured by Millwood Hunt

BUSY MEN THESE DAYS are Reginald W. Bird and his confreres of the Millwood Hunt in preparing the hundred and one details for the horse show on June 3 and 4 at the Bird estate in Framingham, Wavaney Farm. With more than two score classes to be shown during the two-day show there's certainly no end to the preliminary work. Entries close May 25. The judges are Henry L. Bell, New York; Clifford Sifton, Jr., Toronto, and Harry McNair, Chicago.

THE FIRST TWO NAMED judge the points of Hunters and Jumpers, the third passes on the Saddle and Harness Horses. Class No. 36 is for the Millwood Hunt Trophy, and competition will be keen among the Hunts Teams, for Norfolk has two legs on the Challenge Trophy and Myopia the same number, and it takes three wins for ownership. Perhaps in the whole show nothing will keep the gallery more on the alert than the Children's Hunters and the Junior Hunt Teams classes.

CHILDREN NOT YET SIXTEEN will put their mounts over the jumps in the Junior Hunt Teams. Of course there is widespread interest in Class No. 42 also, over the Olympic Course, and in No. 44, for the Wavency Farm Cup, by hunt teams over the outside course. The riders will wear full hunt costume, and Myopia, having won the Challenge Bowl twice, looks like a permanent owner. It's the biggest show, by far, that Millwood has put on, and promises much for the horsey sets.

THE JOSEPH S. SEABURYS OF Weston are going a-traveling. Pater and mater and the two daughters, Miss Martha and Miss Edith Seabury, are soon taking the trans-Atlantic trail to wander as fancy dictates hither and yon over favorite portions of Europe. They will be away practically all the Summer. Mrs. Seabury is the new leader of the Junior Division of the S. P. C. C., a post wherein she succeeds Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon of Jamaica Plain.

ELIZABETH WOODWARD, MRS. R. B. POTTS AND MARY AMES RETURN ON THE PARIS

Cotton Ball Will Hold Interest of Leaders Tonight

ONE OF THE INTERESTING parties at the Cotton Ball this evening will include Dr. and Mrs. Harry L. Goodall, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Haban, Miss Pollie Adams Pierce and Edward Winslow Pierce, 2d. They will look upon this kaleidoscopic scene from Box No. 5. They are planning to wear some very original costumes, and none will be lovelier than Miss Pierce's, a delicate manifestation gleaming and gauzy perfection.

CREATING ATTRACTIVE COSTUMES is play to Miss Pierce, whose creative abilities along the costume line have had full sway during her professional work with the Copley Players. Boston's theatre-going public accords this attractive young woman a warm appreciation as a member of a favorite resident theatrical company. But of the Cotton Ball—consider the hit Mrs. Mathew Luce will make in her fantastic costume. It is of print, a pattern exactly like a grandmother's patchwork quilt.

BRIGHT AND SMILING, MISS MARY AMES and Miss Elizabeth Woodward came in on the steamship Paris a day or two ago after having toured the northern portion of that storied and romantic continent, Africa. Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, mother of the charming and lively Miss Mary Ames, was with the young girls in this up-to-the-moment manner of touring the deserts by motor. From Marrakech and Casablanca on the West to Tunis on the East, by way of Oran and Biskra, they journeyed.

STRAIGHT THROUGH THE country of the Riffs, where history has so recently been made, the Ames party traversed Morocco, then Algeria and Tunisia, the whole Northern African section that the elect is newly finding such a fascinating playground. Mrs. Rockhill Brevoort Potts came back home on the Paris with Mrs. Ames and her party. Mrs. Potts crosses frequently to England and France, her trans-Atlantic travels taking all much the casualness of ferry trips. Her daughter, Miss Anita Potts, and Miss Ames were sister debutantes of the past Winter.

RULING PLEASES DE VALERA

Dublin, May 13 (A.P.)—Eamon De Valera, Republican leader, told the Associated Press today that, as a trustee of the bond issue of the "Irish Republic," he was not dissatisfied with the American court's decision that the money should be returned to the subscribers. In view of all the circumstances, he declared, this was the most natural course any neutral court could take.

His action and that of Stephen O'Mara, as trustee, seeking to have the fund left in their possession, he explained, was merely to prevent the Free State from getting possession of money which was subscribed to the Republican government. In that, he said, they had been successful, and he was certain that the subscribers would not ultimately suffer.

De Valera stated that the decision of the New York court was an interesting commentary on the judgment of the Free State courts, which recently ordered more than 81,000 pounds of the same funds in banks here to be transferred to the Free State Minister of Finance.

CRIMINAL LAW IN THE U. S. FAILURE, SAYS TAFT

Washington, May 13 (A.P.)—Chief Justice Taft today asserted that administration of the criminal laws in recent years had been a "failure."

Addressing members of the American Law Institute, Mr. Taft said: "No lover of his country can have gone through the last three or four years without having been stirred deep in his heart over the failure of the administration of our criminal law."

"I am no pessimist about that," he added, "but I think one of the grounds for being optimistic in regard to it is the deep feeling that has evidenced itself all through the country.

"If you offer, as you are going to, an admirable code to the legislatures of the States, you will find there are majorities in every legislature who will be delighted to be instructed and to be helped in putting in a code that shall be effective and that shall come from a source of impartiality and of knowledge that may not be doubted."

Damroch Radio Adviser

New York, May 13 (A.P.)—Walter Damrosch, who recently resigned as conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra after twelve years as its head, has accepted the post of musical counsel for the National Broadcasting Company.

Bank Burglar Alarm Causes Excitement on State Street

Vault alarm of American Trust Company stirred State street by ringing at 8:30 a. m. today. Crowds collected, but word was passed around that a workman had accidentally collided with the controlling mechanism.

The alarm is operated by a spring, and there was no way to shut it off until it had run its full course.

MAYOR STARTS BUDGET WAR

the city with street signs. He declares this is most unfortunate.

He said: "The work of equipping the city with street signs is essential, not only for the convenience of the general public, but for the business of the city, in particular the retail merchants in both small and large stores. To owners of automobiles good street signs are vital."

A very serious reduction is that by $63,000 in the item for hiring teams and flushing trucks in the sanitary service relating to the North and West End sections of the city.

HARD TO UNDERSTAND.

"It is difficult to understand how anyone can oppose this issue," said the Mayor. "These particular sections affected by this reduction are the most populous and congested sections of our city. Because of their character it is vitally important to the health of the entire city that nothing be done to impair the collection of waste and the cleannig of streets in these sections.

"It was my policy to protect and give service to all sections of the city. I cannot see why the North and West Ends have been selected for scant attention at this time. It means in the long run that every other section will suffer as well."

The cut in the Health Department was made on the item for the care of sick persons with communicable diseases domiciled outside of Boston, but who are legal residents of the city.

NO MORE MAGAZINES.

"It has also been decided that the Health Department shall subscribe for no more medical magazines, and the sum of $50 is thereby cut out. Of course, the Health Department can go to the public library whenever they want to consult a medical magazine, or they can borrow one. If that is the idea of a scientific budget, then I think science is being given anything but a square deal.

"There are many items relating to $50 and $100 savings which must have taxed the ingenuity of somebody in the painful effort to rate everything in the universe at one hair's breadth of its value. A cut in this budget as proposed would be an unfortunate thing for the city. The best that can be said of it is that it does not follow to any considerable extent the crazy advice of the Finance Commission.

RELIES ON COUNCIL.

"I do not anticipate that these proposed reductions will be adopted as planned, as I am confident that a City Council member has too much regard for faithful service rendered by city employes and for the prosperity, health, comfort and convenience of the men, women and children whom he represents."

The controversy today starts a pretty little fight that Mayor Nichols has plunged himself into between the committee and himself.

The committee will report to the council at its meeting Monday. Some of the items may be replaced in the meantime, but on good authority the cut of $220,000 stands as is and it may be swelled to over $250,000 before the final figures are submitted.

'GARDEN OF LOVE' AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

"The Garden of Love," hailed as the greatest Yiddish musical comedy hit ever written, which broke all records both for consecutive runs and attendance at Goldberg and Jacobs' National Theatre on the East Side of New York, opens tonight at the Grand Opera House for a limited engagement. It is from the pen of the gifted young Russian, Alexander Olshanetzky, considered the Victor of the Yiddish musical world. The original cast of Yiddish stars which appeared in New York will be seen at the Grand Opera House.

Pleasant surroundings count. If you are not satisfied with your room—there's a suitable one listed for you in today's Classified Columns. Classification 90.

PLYMOUTH STARS HONOR SULLIVAN TONIGHT

Had Sir Arthur Sullivan lived to see the flourishing presentation given two of his greatest comic operas, now at the Plymouth, he would be 85 years old today. In honor of the anniversary, Winthrop Ames, producer of the current revival, has arranged that his singers will be heard at the close of tonight's performance of "Iolanthe," in some of the hymns written by the famous composer.

"Onward Christian Soldiers" will be one of the selections, and J. Humbird Duffey, of the company, will say a word or two to the audience about the occurrence, and will invite everybody to join in the singing.

ONE CENT SALE

Jersey Ice Cream 30c Pint, 2 Pints for 31c

What Is a One-Cent Sale?

It is a sale where you buy an item at the regular price, then another item of the same kind for one cent. A Profit-Sharing Method of Advertising

This sale was developed by the United Drug Co. as an advertising plan. Rather than spend large sums of money in other ways to convince you of the merit of these goods, they are spending it on this sale in permitting us to sell you a full size package of high standard merchandise for 1 cent. It costs money to get new customers, but the sacrifice in profit is justified, as we know the goods will please you.

SAUL ROBINSON IS FOUND NOT GUILTY

Saul Robinson, a Washington street jeweler, was found not guilty in Municipal Court today of the larceny of $265 from Alexander Gasser, Salem man and former University of Michigan football star. Gasser charged that he went to the jeweler and purchased a diamond ring for $755, paying a deposit of $265. When he returned for the ring the next day he alleged that the stone had been changed. He said he asked for his money back and this was refused.

The case was heard by Judge Michael J. Murray and the jeweler was found not guilty.

RELIGION FOR CHILD ONLY GUARD, SAYS PRIEST

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 13 (A.P.).—"The moral and religious aspect of the United States today is a challenge to all who view with dismay and alarm the rising flood of crime and immorality among girls not yet out of their teens," the Very Rev Peter F. Cusick, S. J., president of Canisius College, Buffalo, told the delegates to the state convention of the Catholic Daughters of America here today.

"The women of today who are sunk in self-made sorrow," the priest said, "would not be in such situations had they been trained in religion and morality during their early years."

"Care for the child and anticipate the cure of the criminal," Father Cusick urged. "It is better by far to look forward with the child, than backward with the criminal. The best remedy of all, as every conscientious American agrees is the religious instruction of youth."

Father Cusick criticised the lack of religion and moral sense among American women and declared that at least half of the 60,000,000 Americans who profess no religion today are women.

3 LEVEES BREAK; 25,000 MORE HOMELESS

Baton Rouge, La., May 13 (I.N.S.).—Three more levees gave way today before the pressure of the terrific Mississippi flood waters.

The Big Bend levee crashed at Moreauville, allowing a wall of water eight feet deep and more than 200 feet wide to sweep through and inundate the countryside for miles around.

Today's trouble adds 25,000 to the list of homeless.

The second break was reported at Bordelonville, in Avoyelles parish, 12 miles from the Moreauville crevasse. The third break was at a point three miles east of Moreauville.

The seven parishes south of the Bayou Des Glaises levee are doomed as a result of the three breaks today and the break at Cottonport, 15 miles west, yesterday.

More rain fell here today and the temperature dropped to 50 degrees, adding to the discomfort and suffering of thousands of refugees concentrated in Red Cross camps in the Lower Mississippi Valley.

SIXTH-BRIDE ROMEO AMONG THE MISSING

J. Theodore Murphy, stage Romeo who took his sixth bride in Boston a few days ago, is playing a role in real life today of which he is probably unconscious. He is a fugitive from justice.

Murphy, who was arested when he applied at City Hall for a license to wed his sixth bride, defaulted in Municipal court, today, on a warrant from Newburg, N. Y., charging him with abandoning a 13-year-old son.

The actor, when arested on the charge, gave bail in the sum of $500 for a preliminary hearing, today. He failed to put in his appearance and a default warant was issued for hif and was turned over to Inspector George Augusta for service.

The inspector sought the aid of the National Vaudeville Association in tracking down Murphy, who is believed to have left oston to fill a vaudeville engagement in another city.

SAILS FOR AFRICA FOR GAME AND A HUSBAND

Miss Eva Agbee of Western Massachusetts sailed out of Boston today on the steamship Giuseppi Verdi, with full intention of bringing back some big game pelts from Africa—and perhaps a husband.

She told reporters she was bound to Africa to meet her fiance, but she wouldn't give the name of the gentleman.

Also among the seventy-five passengers boarding at Boston was Joseph Rallo, 26, being deported back to Lisbon, Spain, as a result of having broken his entrance condition through committing a felony. He has just finished a year's sentence for a holdup. The Guiseppi Verdi is bound for Mediterranean ports.

HEADQUARTERS OPEN FOR BOYS' CLUB DRIVE

Headquarters for the 700 workers in the campaign of the Boys' Club of Boston for $850,000 for expansion and endowment were opened today in the ground floor of the Chamber of Commerce building.

Under the leadership of Mrs. John A. Tuckerman 65 women have been recruited to serve in the women's division of the campaign. Ten teams of six or seven women each have been built up with the following women as captains: Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth, Mrs. David Arnold, Mrs. Andre Reggio, Miss Edith R. Doane, Mrs. Herbert B. Ehrmann, Mrs. Huntington R. Hardwick, Mrs. Phineas W. Sprague, Miss Olive Brett, Miss Eleanor Mason, and Mrs. C. H. Cronin.

Lieut. Lehman Acquitted

Montgomery, Ala., May 13 (A.P.).—Lieutenant Arthur J. Lehman, a Maxwell Field flying officer, was acquitted by a court martial board today of charges connected with the killing of Frank G. Browder last October. The aged cotton broker was killed when an airplane swooped low into a cotton field.

Police Like to Drop in on Costello

Thomas Costello thinks something ought to be done to prevent the liquor squad calling too often at his place in Hampden street, Roxbury.

Costello's near-beer saloon was "pinched" yesterday by Special Officer Garrett of the liquor squad, who claimed he bought hard liquor there.

Well—it's all in a lifetime and Costello got a continuance today.

So he went back to the saloon when, behold, who should walk in innocently, all unknowing of the arrest yesterday, but Officer Collins of the same squad and buy something he said was nearer than near beer.

Therefore Collins arrested Costello all over again, for arraignment tomorrow. It was Friday the Thirteenth for Costello, O. K.

POLAND WANTS 'JERRY' SMITH

Berlin, May 13 (I.N.S.).—The American loan of $70,000,000 to Poland, which has been approved by the Polish Cabinet, will be floated this month, according to advices from Warsaw today. The agreement will be signed in Paris.

Jeremiah Smith of Boston, who acted as financial dictator of Hungary, is favored as a possible nominee for American financial adviser to the Bank Polski, as agreed upon under the terms of the loan.

CONDUCTOR WHO SAVED 350 IN FOREST FIRE DEAD

St. Paul, Minn., May 13 (A.P.).—Thomas Sullivan, conductor of the train that carried 350 persons to safety when forest fires destroyed Hinckley, Minn., 33 years ago, will be buried today. He died at the age of 67.

During the fire he brought his train from Duluth within a mile and a half of the Hinckley disaster in which 418 lives were lost. He filled four cars with refugees and while a number clung to the side of the train he backed it up out of danger. He was severely burned.

WOMEN PROTEST STYLES SELECTED BY MERE MAN

Atlantic City, N. J., May 13 (A.P.).—Too many men and not enough women are passing upon or rejecting new designs in cotton fabrics before they are offered to the buyer in the retail store, Miss Laurice T. Moreland, fashion expert, told the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers in convention here today.

President William B. MacColl of Rhode Island opened the meeting with a welcome to the members assembled for the joint convention with the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association today and tomorrow.

PASS SEVEN WORDS OF TRADES UNION BILL

London, May 13 (A.P.)—Only the first seven words of the Trades Union bill, designed to prevent coercive strikes, has been passed by the House of Commons, sitting as a committee to consider the measure, when it adjourned today. Closure had to be invoked to end the debate which had been in progress two days, and will be resumed Monday.

There was much noisy opposition during the night session. Most of the contention centered about the definition of a coercive general strike.

COUNTESS SALM WEEPS WITH JOY, MEETING DAD

Cherbourg, France, May 13 (A.P.).—Countess Salm-Hoogstraeten, the former Millicent Rogers, was so excited after a tearful but joyous reunion with her father, Colonel H. H. Rogers, and her little son Peter, when they disembarked from the Olympic today that arrangements for the trip to Paris were nearly upset.

She was nearly carried away by the train which was to take Peter. She went by auto.

COMMISSION IN SACCO CASE OPPOSED

the power to determine whether a pardon should be granted, and the Governor ought not to be embarrassed by the published findings of any other body in reaching his own conclusion."

The signers of the statement were Alexander Lincoln, for eight years an attorney general of Massachusetts; Moorfield Storey, world-renowned jurist; Homer Albers, dean of B. U. Law School; Melvin W. Johnson, Julian Codman, Thomas W. Proctor and Robert W. Nason.

WANT PEOPLE TO KNOW

Their professed purpose was to explain the true state of affairs to the public, as regards the constitutioanl aspects of the situation.

Governor Fuller was emphatically warned today by another attorney not to let his courage lead him into neglecting precautions to safeguard his life in case his decision seals the doom of the condemned pair.

He also received a veiled threat from a Chelsea girl, who signs herself Grace A. Zarrella of Broadway. She wrote:

"Dear Mr. Fuller:

I am deep of sorry for the two men, Sacco and Vanzetti. I believe innocent. Save from the chair. Do it for your health."

The warning to Governor Fuller to protect himself came from Frederick W. Peabody, Boston lawyer and member of the bars of New York and California as well, who included in his letter a spirited defense of the Massachusetts courts.

"Little short of an outrage," he termed the action of the hundreds of letter writers and the thousands of petition signers who have urged the Governor to take action in favor of the condemned pair, and he accused them of giving the world the impression that Massachusets cannot adjudicate her cases properly.

WARNS HIM OF DANGER.

"I appreciate most keenly your position and the danger to you personally that may lie in a decision adverse to the condemned criminals, and I most emphatically hope that if you shall determine to sustain the courts, every possible precaution will be taken for assuring your personal safety.

"Please do not permit the courage of which I know you to be possessed to lead you to neglect extreme precautions for your own safety.

"The courts of Massachusetts have long been famed for honesty, integrity and efficiency, and you are now asked to declare them incompetent or unwilling to do justice to men accused and convicted of crime.

"If in this case the courts are declared incompetent, what conceivable reason can exist in any future case for not again setting aside their verdict and what remnant of public confidence will remain in the tribunals of the Commonwealth."

Chicago, May 13 (I.N.S.).—Attorney Irving Breakstone telegraphed Arnold Harris, his partner, today that he was waiting at the Supreme Court Building in Springfield to get the certificaton of the writ expected to save Elin Lyons from the hangman's noose.

An airplane has been engaged by Breakstone to carry him to Chicago, where Lyons is in the death cell, scheduled to be hanged before sunset, unless the certified writ is placed in the hands of Sheriff Charles E. Graydon.

Lyons was convicted of killing Policeman Julian Bonfield in a holdup last December.

MR. PICKWICK IN OLD COACH ON HUB TOUR

Mr. Pickwick rode abroad again today.

He rode abroad in the ancient coach "Commodore" because it is his 100th birthday, and he paid his respects to the Governor, the Mayor and educational and literary figures in the Hub, in Cambridge and in Brookline.

With four horses drawing the old coach that once was a vehicle for Charles Dickens himself on journeys between Rochester and London, Eng., Mr. Pickwick and his friends were carrying out a [illegible] that the [illegible] anniversary of a similar ride out of London 100 years ago.

Of course the Mr. Pickwick of today was a [illegible] a figure even a little removed from the character of Dickens' fictional figure, for the modern [illegible] was the stage character in the past. Pickwick now at the Majestic Theatre.

Starting the observation of the 100th anniversary of his [illegible] venture, Mr. Pickwick assembled with his friends in the Dickens room of the Parker House. Here the members of the group were welcomed at [illegible] president of the Dickens Fellowship of Boston.

At 11:30 the coach rolled up to the door out of the sea of moving automobiles that 100 years ago were not thought of.

The fourteen [illegible] representatives of the old Pickwick [illegible] walked across School street and were received by Mayor Nichols and other City Hall officials. From there the route called for a trip to the State House. Traffic was stopped by Captain Bernard Hoppe. With a blare of the long coach horn the prancing four-in-hand dashed up the hill and drew up before the main gate of the State House grounds.

Lieutenant Governor Frank G. Allen welcomed the visitors in the name of the Commonwealth. Hundreds of State employees thronged the corridors and windows to watch the picturesque figures in their early Victorian garb.

The coach [illegible] way down [illegible] Harvard.

[illegible] received the company in the faculty room at University Hall. With him on the reception committee were Professor Charles Townsend Copeland and Dean Clifford T. Moore.

The final stop was the home of Mrs. Larz Anderson, the owner of the magnificent team of horses which drew the famous coach.

NAME DICTATOR TO RESTRICT OIL OUTPUT

New York, May 13 (A. P.)—An independent oil operator, Ray H. Colling of Tulsa, Okla., today assumed the office of dictator in the nation's bonanza oil pool, the Seminole field in Oklahoma, with supreme authority to place an artificial restriction on output for the next two weeks.

The vesting of a dictatorship by representatives of nine of the country's largest operators, meeting here to consider a policy of curtailment, marks the first time since the enactment of the anti-trust laws that a basic industry has taken so drastic a step.

A committee of five was selected to develop a plan that would apply in all production areas and report at a meeting to be held in New York May 25, at which time Colling will announce the results of his survey in the Seminole field. The committee consists of Walter C. Teagle, A. I. Beaty, C. S. Dawson, Henry Dawes and R. W. Stewart.

Mr. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, who called the conference, avoided discussion of the legal issues involved following conferences this week at Washington with Dr. Hubert C. Work, Secretary of the Interior. While the administration is understood to be in sympathy with the effort, no definite assurance has been given. It was said that permission would be granted to a curtailment policy that would result in higher prices for gasoline and other petroleum products.

The principal Standard Oil companies, especially those of New Jersey, New York and Indiana, are recognized as the motivating force in the effort at stabilization.

Erving P. Morse, president of the Houghton & Dutton Company, was the guest of honor at the annual Costume Party and entertainment of the Mutual Relief Association of the Houghton & Dutton store in Convention Hall last evening.

A varied program was featured by vaudeville skits arranged and directed by Dana White. Mr. White himself played the mammy "heavy" in a Southern farce assisted by Louis Decker and Matthew Gorman. Captain Charles Hurley led his one-man army, YD veteran, Mattie Duran, through a masterly exposition of the manual of arms to the accompaniment of Decker and Gorman comic pantomime.

Mae Galvin, James Clancy and Cathy Pekat were the vocal and instrumental soloists who afforded an unusually comely chorus several opportunities to illustrate the latest dance steps.

The chorus included Alyce Brown, Evelyn Rose, Marion Reid, Gladys de Grasse, Lillian Sahl, Alice Green, Rose McLellan, Carrie Mills and Margaret Fairmonle, director.

"This program was named a 'Poverty Party,'" commented the association president Joseph Nickerson in congratulating the players for their efforts, "but the title is a misnomer if we would judge it from the wealth of talent it displayed."

Prizes of gold were awarded the winners of the costume contest. Because of the unusually large number of entrants the contest was divided into four groups who paraded before the assembly and guests between dance numbers. The judges were Walter Myers, Lewis S. Whitcomb and Fred Hawkins of the broadcaster staff of Station WEEI.

Rena Keenan as Flora Finch, Sarah Dushane as Huckleberry Finn and Mrs. Gertrude Thorpe were the winners of the three first prizes of $10 gold pieces, having been chosen unanimously in a second elimination of group winners.

The other winners were Mabel Bond and Mary Berman from the seventh, eighth and ninth floors; Rena Keenan and Helen Ryan from the fourth, fifth and sixth floors; Mrs. Helen Hamlin and Mae McEvoy from the third floor; Anna Erickson and Pearl Jones from the second floor; Sarah Dushane and Kitty Danahy, from the first floor and Mrs. Gertrude Thorpe and Wallace Snow from the basement entrants. All these winners were given $5 gold pieces.

The prize presentations were made by President Morse himself.

Dancing followed the stage entertainment and costume contest.

With President Morse as guests of honor were other officials of the store, including Sales Manager [illegible] F. Terry and Mrs. Terry, Superintendent Charles F. Vedder and Mrs. Vedder and Assistant Superintendent Harry B. Lowe and Mrs. Lowe.

Harry Highfleet was master of ceremonies on the dance floor and George Casey arranged the details of the costume contest.

THAT GOVERNOR MARTIN has rendered great services to Florida in financing $10,000,000 of Everglades drainage is shown by S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Railway, who assisted in negotiating the financing with Dillon, Read, and Eldredge & Company.

THIS DRAINAGE will dispose of surplus waters from Lake Okechobee, and open to agricultural development 4,000,000 acres of the most wonderfully fertile land on earth, lying along the southeastern crest of Florida, and the Saint Lucie Canal, as far east as Stuart.

IN PLYMOUTH CHURCH, Brooklyn, on a Sunday morning, long ago, Henry Ward Beecher presented a young negro slave girl to his congregation, and proceeded to sell her at public auction, asking for gifts totalling $900, the sum necessary to buy the girl's freedom.

Beecher imitated the manner and speech of a slave auctioneer and more than $900 was raised. Rose Terry, a writer, put a valuable ring in the plate, and Beecher, putting it on the girl's finger, said "with this ring I thee wed—to freedom."

BEECHER IS DEAD, but the good work that he did lives on. And next Sunday morning, when Plymouth Church celebrates its eightieth anniversary, the former slave girl, sold at public auction in that church, will be present, a happy old grandmother, married to a prosperous negro lawyer of Washington, D. C.

CONGRATULATIONS are due Secretary of War Davis for his mobilization of airplanes at San Antonio from all over the country. With no fatal accident 103 planes have gathered at the rendezvous, flying a total of more than 200,000 miles. And when the fliers return to their bases the total flight will exceed 400,000 miles.

ESPECIALLY gratifying was the achievement of the swift pursuit plane formation, the fliers driving on through fog and storm 1,300 miles in one day, the longest flight ever accomplished by so large a body of fliers.

NON BIS IN IDEM is a motto worth remembering.

Each generation should have its own ideas. When his congregation in the lowlands, near Parkin, Ark., were told by their pastor that a flood was coming and they should build an ark, they hastily built one and crowded into it with pigs, chickens, mules, wives, children.

SURE ENOUGH, the flood came, crawling over the land, and the colored pastor stood high in the estimation of his flock, rejoicing in the ark.

Then, alas, water poured through many leaks. The hull was not calked and the ark would not float. When the water rose a foot and a half the congregation waded to a railroad embankment, and decided that theirs was a different flood.

EXPERTS FROM Newfoundland give faint hope that Nungesser and his companion may be alive. If, by good fortune, they have landed in Newfoundland, it might take many days for them to reach a settlement.

Hardy, courageous men, they would be able to endure and survive great hardships.

MEANWHILE, men on this side are preparing for the same Paris-New York flight eastward. Bertaud may start in his Bellanca plane tonight, to forestall Lindbergh, who flew here from St. Louis in his Ryan plane, prepared to move straight on to Paris.

COMMANDER BYRD, first to fly over the North Pole, is almost ready for his ocean flight. Some one of the three will undoubtedly succeed, but it would have pleased this country better had the brave Frenchmen landed safely, winning the great honor.

ANALYSIS

The Value of Investment Analysis Depends Upon the Technique of the Analyst

CHEMICAL research plays an important part in the industrial progress of the world. Years of study and research are necessary before the Chemist is considered competent.

Likewise, expert knowledge of business conditions, market trends, earnings, property values, and other factors, comes only through years of study and experience. A little knowledge improperly applied is truly a dangerous thing.

Through an investment analysis the investor obtains an up-to-the-minute survey of the present status of his holdings, and also concrete suggestions for certain changes that often are of great benefit.

Constructive Analysis by OLD COLONY CORPORATION is available through an experienced staff of specialists. They are backed by the necessary equipment that keeps a mass of reliable and accurate information constantly available.

These Men Did More Than Paid For; Result, Success

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May 13.—"What should I do to get on?" a young man asked.

"Do more than you're paid to do," was my reply.

Similarly the business concern that desires to prosper should fulfil more than it promises.

HENRY P. DAVISON, perhaps the most brilliant partner J. P. Morgan and Company ever had, used to take a keen interest in the firm's office boys.

B. C. Forbes

"When I get off the elevator in our office," he said, "I watch how the office boys on duty there act. I notice that some of them pay no attention [illegible] eye. Occasionally we find one who keeps his eye on the elevator and is on his toes when the door opens, to see if he can be of any service to the person coming out. We have one of this type just now. I have my eye on him. I am quite sure he will go far. He is on his toes every moment of the day."

THE LATE John H. Patterson was in certain respects a hard taskmaster—not with ordinary workers, but with executives. From them he expected and demanded a lot. If they could not respond satisfactorily, he had no use for them. The man who has been general manager of the National Cash Register Company for years, winning that position at an extraordinarily early age, gained his first recognition by doing more than he was paid for.

Mr. Patterson visited the plant at an unearthly early hour one morning. He discovered a young man already there, working industriously. Questioned, the young man explained that certain work had to be done and that he was eager to [illegible] done without [illegible]

That young man was J. H. Barringer. His rise from the [illegible] was rapid and his record abundantly justified his promotion.

I TALKED the other day with Sidney Z. Mitchell, president of the Electric Bond & Share Company, and recognized as perhaps the ablest man in the electric power field. He began at the very bottom in the Northwest. He thought nothing of doing the most menial work around the small power plants he began to develop. He has worked practically night and day in the intervening forty years.

One of his assistants mentioned to me this week that he himself hadn't left work before well into the evening on any recent day. Mr. Mitchell thinks nothing of working until midnight. Nor when he goes out inspecting plants is it uncommon for him to be on the job at 5 in the morning.

In other words, he has always followed the policy of doing more than he was paid for doing—and it is many years since he had to worry over the wolf coming to his doors.

JOHN HERTZ of Yellow Taxi fame and several times a millionaire, sold more automobiles than any other five salesmen in Chicago in the infancy of the motor industry. Why? In those days automobiles had an awkward habit of breaking down at the most embarrassing times and places. To every customer young Hertz said: "Whenever you have any trouble with your car call me up at any hour of the day or night. I'll be delighted to come and help you out," and this promise he unfailingly fulfilled.

Again it was a case of doing more than he was getting paid for doing.

Officer Has a Mind That Works on Stolen Autos

Psychologists might do worse than study the mind of Traffic Officer John Brosnahan of the Somerville police force.

Today at roll-call the officer heard a list of registrations of stolen automobiles read off. It was a part of the routine of the day.

An hour later the officer was standing at Somerville avenue and Prospect street when a machine rolled by. The registration numbers appeared strangely familiar to the officer. He overtook the machine and placed the occupants under arrest.

The prisoners are Thomas Flynn, a sailor, of West Somerville, and Thomas F. Sullivan of Prospect street, Cambridge. They are charged with the theft of the car.

INSURANCE LAW MADE EASY FOR TOURISTS

Motorists from other states who come to Massachusetts for their summer vacations will not be unduly inconvenienced by the compulsory automobile insurance law which is in effect here, according Edward C. Stacy, secretary of the Massachusetts Section of the New England Council, and general secretary of the Massachusetts State Chamber of Commerce.

Motorists remaining in the State for less than 30 days need pay no attention to the compulsory insurance law, Mr. Stacy points out. Others who come to spend a longer period than a month in the Bay State [illegible] have their present liability insurance adjusted to meet the requirements of the Massachusetts law without any expense, according to his statement. In most states, Mr. Stacy says, the rates for liability insurance are higher than the rates fixed by law here. Trouble Brewing in A. L.
Mack vs. Johnson
Ban on Way Out

Tunney Not Invincible
Clean Liver
But Crown in Danger

MACK'S ACTIONS MEANS BAN IS GOING

WAR clouds loom, as the cable dispatches say, in the American League. Connie Mack has declared open war on Ban Johnson. The fervid utterances of the tall strategist of Philadelphia mean something. Connie has never been given to loquacity. He has parked in the fastness of his tent through a million revolutions and scandals. He has, in a baseball way, been as silent as Coolidge.

Nick Flatley

Now we find him bombastically calling the head of his league harsh names protesting against umpires, and doing all the things that would have riled his calm and conservative soul a year ago.

Connie, in the past frequent spats of the American circuit, always trailed along with Ban. He seemed to realize that Byron B. had ushered him, Connie, into a fortune, and that his scantest gratitude could be but silence when the big mogul was making himself ridiculous.

Times have changed now. Connie is all het up over the fines and suspensions of Cobb and Simmons and doesn't hesitate to say so. His language is neither guarded nor considerate. He is, as the boys put it, popping off.

When C. Mack does that it's the tipoff that the whole league has decided that Johnson must go. The most placid member is the spokesman. In case you're inclined that way, you might make a note to the effect that a new American League president will be on the job before another season rolls along.

There have been several $100,000 per candidates mentioned for the job that Ban created. The old-timers cringe when they think of that much money. But the Mackian broadsides point inevitably to the conclusion that it has been unanimously agreed that Ban must slide out of the picture.

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE HAS PLENTY OF OLYMPIC TRIALS

EXPERTS HAVE WRONG DOPE ON TUNNEY

VARIOUS experts, who, incidentally never thought of it before the Dempsey fight, are declaring that Gene Tunney is a much better scrapper than most people credit him with being. They take pleasure in saying that nobody will appear from the welter of contenders to bother the former marine even slightly.

Said experts overlook, as they always do, the fact that Mister Tunney is spending his days, and evenings, in placid contentment. Gene isn't a drinker nor a wastrel. He's about as clean a living champion as any sport has known.

The chasers after his crown are working at their business, however. They are climbing up the trail toward the pinnacle that Gene reached when he won the battle of the Sesquicentennial. Dempsey, a grand physical specimen couldn't come back, after his long vacation.

The same thing may happen to Tunney. Competition and desire are the two qualities that athletes must have to linger at the crest.

RICKARD PLANS BIG HUB ARENA

Also Tells Jack Conway That Paulino Will Never Fight Ed Keeley

dream but now they are a reality.

"Hockey has also gone big wherever the sport has been put on at a large scale. I know the Arena in Boston was not large enough for the crowds which wished to attend some of the hockey games during the past season."

Rickard stated that the Madison Square club, the millionaire organization which is associated with the Garden, has bought $22,000 worth of ringside tickets for the Sharkey-Maloney bout.

"It is orders like this one which will make the show draw $400,000," said Tex. "I expect to take $100,000 right out of New England. I have already been paid more money by Boston and New England fans for this show than a boxing bout ever drew in that section of the country.

"New England will support big shows if you give them to it. This is one reason why the new indoor place in Boston will prove an instant success."

Rickard Tells Conway Paolino Won't Fight Keeley

Paolino will never battle Ed Keeley in Boston for the Argonne A. A., Tex Rickard also declared to me today after the New York Commission had refused another request by Paolino to be reinstated.

Rickard revealed he had a contract with Paolino calling for the Spaniard's exclusive services in the United States and that it is impossible for Al Mayer or anybody else to sign the woodchopper for matches other than under his promotion.

"I shall appear before the New York Boxing Commission at its meeting on next Tuesday," said Rickard. "At that time I shall produce my original contract with Paolino which was signed at the time the Spaniard arrived in America.

"The terms of this contract specify that Paolino must not box for anybody but me unless I give my consent in writing. I have not given any written consent for a bout in Boston between Paolino and Keeley.

"I might have given my consent to a Boston appearance by Paulino if somebody other than Keeley had been selected as an opponent. I do not care to have the Spaniard risk a ring future by meeting a southpaw like Keeley.

"I still plan to match Paolino with Jack Dempsey. This bout will be run at the Yankee Stadium in [illegible]. My present plan calls for the Sharkey-Maloney victor to clash with the winner of the Dempsey-Paolino tussle and the survivor to meet Gene Tunney for the title."

"We'll Stand by Mack," Says Gene Buckley

Eugene Buckley of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission, when informed by the Boston Evening American of Tex Rickard's claim that Paolino is not bound to box Ed Keeley here because Mayer, Paolino's manager, did not have the right to sign for bouts, emphatically declared that Paolino must fight here or stand suspended.

"Mayer is Paolino's licensed and official manager," declared Buckley, "and we stand by our decision."

B. & M. Confirms Rickard's Statement

Negotiations are in progress regarding a Tex Rickard sports coloseum at the North Station, Frank T. [illegible], special representative of the Boston & Maine Railroad said today when queried by the Boston Evening American.

This "Madison Square Garden in Boston," the railroad spokesman explained, would be constructed over the present station as part of the new and improved group of buildings which have been tentatively planned to include a hotel, office building and garage, all fronting on a $1,000,000 connecting highway from the city's centre through to Cambridge.

The Pirates depart for Brooklyn where tomorrow they open a series with the Dodgers. The Chicago Cubs, coming from Philadelphia, are due here tomorrow to play the first game of a series with the Braves at the Wigwam.

Tex Has Real Rival in Fugazy-Mr. Boston

By Jack Conway

NEW YORK, May 13.—"There's no truth to that story about a moth flying out when the Scotchman opened his pocketbook," said Mr. Boston today. "When the Scotchman opened his pocketbook the moth was dead."

Mr Boston

"Scotty Monteith or somebody told this one at the All Sports testimonial dinner at the Astor.

"Which caused Jimmy Johnson, manager of Mike McTigue, to go him one better.

"'There once was a Scotchman who went into a butcher's shop and ordered the head of a sheep,' said Jimmy. 'And he said to the Scotchman instead of the butcher, [illegible] cut off the head as near the tail as possible.'

"Somebody then came around and asked if anybody would care for a little non-[illegible] stimulant.

"'What are you giving?' demanded Mr. [illegible].

"Anyway, it was a good dinner. The [illegible] had some food and plenty of [illegible]. I am beginning to [illegible] New York is a suburb of Paris or of London. [illegible] not such a bad place to spend a few days after all.

"THE dinner was kind of a who's who in sports affairs. Gene Tunney was there [illegible] without the high hat. So were most of the other sons of [illegible].

"Jack Sharkey [illegible] with the gang [illegible] Dan Carroll [illegible] taining for the Maloney [illegible].

"'Where's Maloney?' [illegible] Sharkey asked Carroll.

"'I'm [illegible],' replied [illegible].

"'I hope he won't have a heartache on the 19th,' shot back Sharkey. 'All I ask is that you get him into the ring.'

"Sam Taub, New York boxing writer, stepped in between the verbal broadside and insisted that Dan and Jack [illegible].

"'Dan's a friend of mine,' said Sharkey. 'It's his fighter I am after.'

"Ike Dorgan, Rickard's ballyhoo man, passed the [illegible].

"'What a steam-up bird that Sharkey is,' he said. 'I don't have to write any copy with Jack around.'

"TEX RICKARD and Humbert J. Fugazy were at the dinner. The master of ceremonies was smart enough not to sit the rival promoters next to each other. Both were introduced and Fugazy got the bigger hand. It looks as though Tex will soon have a real boxing war on his hands. Up to date he has had things pretty soft, as he has had virtually a monopoly on the indoor shows here on account of having the only large arena. But now Fugazy is going to drop one of those [illegible] million dollar places up around the hustling Fifties. Then it won't be all sunshine for Rickard.

"Jim Farley, chairman of the New York boxing commission, was there. Jim didn't do any talking, but one of his right eyes did.

"'How about Dempsey,' I asked.

"'Oh yes,' he said. 'You mean the fighter.'

"'They tell me he looks as though he is in the pink,' I went on.

"'Looks are often deceiving,' he resumed. 'He may look all right, but is there any real fighting class under the surface? Jack won't be allowed to fight Gene Tunney in New York unless he bowls over some youngster like Maloney, Sharkey and Paolino.'"

STAR FIELD IN '880' AT STADIUM

Half-Mile Promises to Be Feature of Harvard Interscholastic Meet Tomorrow

Ralph Boches, crack Boston Latin half miler, has been added to the field that will start in the 880-yard run in the Harvard Interscholastic track and field meet at the Stadium, Saturday afternoon.

The Latin School relay team was to have run at Yale Saturday, but school authorities decided to pass up this trip. This leaves Boches free to seek added fame in the half mile at the Stadium.

Included in the field for the 880 are Ralph Heath of Worcester Academy and Dick Ha[illegible] of Lowell High. These two fellows, along with Boches, are expected to make the fight for first honors.

The 100 yard dash will bring together Lewis of English and Yavner of Dorchester. This looms as a real race. In the 220 the speedy Yavner will be up against Mark Woodbury of Latin School, one of the best schoolboy sprinters.

A year ago the meet was won by Andover. Again this year Andover has a team entered but it appears to lack the all round strength needed to come through a winner.

GIANTS' SUB LEADS GREAT HORNSBY IN BATTING

New York, May 13.—When is a substitute not a substitute? A.—When he's leading the National League in batting.

This is the strange case of Eddie Farrell, utility infielder of the New York Giants, who today has passed the great Rogers Hornsby and is leading the National League's sluggers with the amazing average of .396.

Tunney Takes Own Case to Prove That a Good Boxer Is Better Than a Good Slugger

IT seems to be a tossup as to whether sluggery or boxing skill is the greater asset in ring warfare among the heavyweights.

If you peruse the records that embrace the list of heavyweight champions from Sullivan's day to mine, you will find this

SLUGGERS	BOXERS
Sullivan	Corbett
Fitzsimmons	Johnson
Dempsey	Tunney

Jeffries and Willard do not seem to come strictly under either classification. They were a mixture of both. Jeff was a great boxer when he needed to be. Also, he was a terrific hitter.

He won some of his greatest battles because of his skill as a boxer, while he triumphed in others by just going out, as Sullivan, Fitz and Dempsey did, and making it a [illegible] to the encounter with the slogan, "May the best puncher win."

JESS A TERRIFIC HITTER

Willard was a terrific hitter in those moments when he really went out to slug. He was, because of his great size and his powerful reach, a good boxer inasmuch as his left jab enabled him to keep most of his foemen at a very respectable distance.

So Willard's success was achieved like Jeff's, partly through being a boxer and partly because, when angered or goaded, he became a vicious slugger.

Apparently the average pugilistic devotees rate a slugger in higher esteem than they do a boxer. This is reflected in the fact that when Sullivan, a slugger, met Corbett the boxer, that Sullivan was a 4 to 1 betting favorite. And when Dempsey and I met, the public made Jack a 3 to 1 favorite over me.

Not so long ago I talked to a man who has lived for many years in the shadows of the prize rings, and asked him why the public usually favored a slugger over a boxer, he answered.

"Well, a boxer usually has to travel the entire route to gain victory. The only way he can figure to win against a slugger is to keep out of danger all through the fight and meanwhile land his taps and snaps and roll up his points in that way.

"But a slugger—well, he may lose the first 14 rounds of a 15-round fight and he still can win by putting through a paralyzing punch in the 15th.

CAN'T K. O. MIDGETS.

"So you see, the public favors the slugger because he needs only one or two well placed shots to win, whereas the boxer must land a few hundred punches."

An odd thing about sluggers, is that they usually have trouble defeating men smaller than themselves. John L. had two chances against the diminutive Charlie Mitchell—and couldn't put him away.

Fitz knocked out all the big fellows through a four or five-year period, but the best he could do against the smaller Joe Choynski, when he was going at his superlative best, was a draw.

And Dempsey was no different. He had three chances against the midget Willie Meehan, and never stopped him. Against other men, smaller and lighter than himself, Dempsey was not effective. Like John L. and Fitz, Dempsey gained his reputation for greatness only against slow moving big men.

It was my opinion, long ago, that a fast, clever boxer could beat the greatest of sluggers. So I went in for boxing, rather than slugging. I met up one day with the greatest slugger of this generation—and the result is history.

A boxer is not as spectacular as a slugger, but he plods along and gets results—and results are the only things that really count.

ROLLED STOCKING FAVORITE

Name Is on Every Tongue on Eve of the Great Kentucky Derby; Few Favor Osmand

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Louisville, Ky., May 13.—It may be a case of mixing metaphors in a country where everybody is supposed to mix drinks, but the fact of the matter is that the name of Rolled Stocking is on every tongue today, twenty-four hours before the field will break from the barrier in the race of all races, Kentucky's annual derby.

Stop a horseman, real or fancied, anywhere along Fourth street, which means bracing the first stranger you meet. Then ask him who he likes in the race. If you don't, he is likely to misunderstand and either hand you a dime or a clip on the vandyke.

Perhaps he will mention the Whitney entry of Bostonian and Whiskery, but if he does he will qualify the choice by also naming Rolled Stocking. It may be that Rip Rap of the Sage stable has caught his fancy. Again, however, there will be that second guess on Rolled Stocking.

ROLLED STOCKING FAVORITE.

In the same way it might be Black Panther or Fred, Jr., a big horse that has managed to get himself taken rather seriously, but the stranger somehow will contrive to get Rolled Stocking into the conversation.

And at least two men in five are picking him to win, although there is slight doubt now that the Whitney entry will go to the post a reigning favorite.

You can't go behind this par any more than you can go behind the nape of your neck, but barring that Rolled Stocking is the stand-out horse of the race today.

The leaning toward Rip Rap, Black Panther and a few casual others is a mere symptom, but Rolled Stocking and the Whitney entry are an epidemic.

Osmand, Winter book favorite, is not esteemed at all after straightening out like a tight rope in his last race at the Downs. Hydromel, a hot choice a week ago, suddenly ran a fever and now no one would take him for backing.

FEW LIKE OSMAND

The Bradley entries, Bewithus and Buddy Bauer, have everyone at the track looking down the nose at them.

Here and there you will find a citizen who likes Osmand and even Scapa Flow. Dan O'Sullivan, who has seen more derbies than the original Mad Hatter, is sticking with Osmand and Scott Harlan persists in declaring himself for Scapa Flow, but the mob is going the other way.

"As for the rest of the field, Saxon, Jock, Kiev, another Winter delusion, War Eagle, Royal Julian, Candy Blackbird, Crystal Domino, Mr. Kirkwood and Fair Star, they will be among those present and unaccounted for, according to the popular idea hereabouts.

And then we come back to Rolled Stocking, as the male eye inevitably will. They say he was all horse in winning the last Derby trial and can run in any going or any company.

That closes the book, except for the observation that no Derby within ten years has been as open to any good horse as is the one that will take place tomorrow on the Downs.

18 Colts Entered for Big Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 13 (A. P.)—Eighteen colts were entered today for the fifty-third renewal of the Kentucky Derby, at a mile and a quarter for $50,000 added money and a gold cup, to be run at Churchill Downs tomorrow afternoon.

The entry list with post position, horse, owner and jockey follows:

Ad Club Golf Notes

The Advertising Club of Boston held one of its most successful golf tournaments yesterday at the Pine Brook Valley Country Club. Although some of the members were on hand for morning practice, the tournament did not get under way until after lunch, but during the p. m. 87 members and guests golfed around that snappy course.

Major P. F. O'Keefe, who is the president of the Advertising Club of Boston, felt that as this was to be the last tournament played under his regime he should lead the field. And he did. The Major encountered more trouble negotiating the outward holes than he did coming home. He was out in 81 and returned in 79 for an even 160.

One of the most difficult tasks connected with the Advertising Club tournament was to avoid winning a prize. There were 87 starters and about 86 prizes, which included all kinds of commodities from a dozen packages of Lux to a casket.

Walter Falvey of the Portland Cement Co. carried home the low gross trophy. Although Falvey was not very successful on the greens, he was two strokes under 80 for his round.

Earl Manning of the John Hancock Insurance Co., Walter Burrow and R. M. Purvis of Woodland and Pinehurst, tied for second gross with 82s.

A couple of 23-handicap men took care of the net prizes. J. Farrell from the Metacomet Country Club of Providence, R. I., who has not played golf for a year clicked off an 85 gross while O. R. Graham told them to reduce his handicap from an 87. Not so bad.

Dr. W. F. Shea, who was a guest of his brother Jack, the master of ceremonies, offered three prizes. His offer was that he would fill three cavities for the player having the most 7s. Not to be outdone by the dentist, Nelson Hooper of the National Casket Co. donated a casket, a useful but not very cheerful trophy to annex.

Jack Shea, Walter Burrow, Walter Falvey and Dr. Shea were unable to place the blame for missed shots on the fact that their hair interfered with their vision. Every member of this foursome is as bald as the well known eagle.

E. W. Joyce of Joyce Brothers, who played with Leslie Brummett of Hewes and Potter, stated that he never enjoyed a round of golf more thoroughly, but refused to make any mention of the total number of strokes necessary for him to get around the 18 holes. Les Brummett dropped a hint that if an even 100 were added to the number of holes played it would be Ed Joyce's score.

Bart Hydorn, of the Albert Frank Co., was shooting a far better brand of golf than his 98 indicates. He had about three bad holes but he would have made up for the misses on these had he been able to get his putter working.

H. W. Schaschke of the Gilchrist Co., was well on his way to break 100 until he reached the long and hard 17th. The donor of the well known Schaschke Cup, which is emblematic of the Boston Retail Stores Association championship, was out in 43, fine going for any ordinary golfer at Pine Brook Valley, and he needed a 6,4 for an even 50 on the return trip, for he encountered so much trouble on the 17th that he ruined his chances and was 103 for the round.

Sharkey Is Officially Pronounced in Shape

By JACK CONWAY

New York, May 13.—Jack Sharkey has been pronounced physically fit for his 15-round battle with Jim Maloney on May 19 by Deputy Boxing Commissioner Eddie Curry.

Jack Conway

Curry dropped in at Stillman's Gym to see Sharkey work in line with the new policy of the New York Boxing Commission to look over all boxers in the heavyweight bouts a week or so before a contest.

The original Sharkey training schedule called for him to take a day off, but when Johnny Buckley informed Jack that a representative of the Boxing Commission wished to see him [illegible], he hopped up to Stillman's.

Deputy Commissioner Curry was accompanied by Jess MacMahon, Tex Rickard's matchmaker.

I asked Curry how he found Sharkey. "Sharkey is in fine condition," said the deputy commissioner. "He is as fast as lightning in the ring, and his wind is perfect. He weighed 195 pounds when I had him hop on the scales. He says he will be between 188 and 190 pounds by post time.

"I understand that Sharkey always takes the best of care of himself which accounts for his superb physical condition."

MacMahon was also enthusiastic about Sharkey. "He looks fine and ready to go right now," said Jess.

DUNDEE PRAISES JACK.

Johnny Dundee, who still insists he is featherweight champion of the world, also gave Jack the once over at this workout. "He is the fastest big man I have ever seen," said Dundee. "Sharkey also knows how to conserve his energy. The trouble with most boxers is that they think the way to be clever is to do a marathon around the ring. If you watch Sharkey closely you will see that he avoids punches by merely moving his head or body a few inches. In this way he saves his energy and is able to go a long distance without tiring."

Bob Edgren, famous sport writer, was enthusiastic about Sharkey's speed. "They tell me Maloney is much slower than Sharkey," said Edgren. "I don't see how a slow man can defeat Jack. I believe Dempsey is the only heavyweight who can beat Sharkey.

"I talked with Dempsey a few weeks ago at his camp in the mountains in California. Jack has recovered from the illness that bothered him at the time he fought Tunney and for several months after that contest. He will be ready to fight in a few months."

Sharkey boxed one round with Paul Cavelier, two with Tom Randolph, two with Joe Roggi and two with Rocky (Strongheart) Stone. It was incidentally Rocky's final workout before his tussle with Leone Labriola at Syracuse tomorrow night.

BETTING AT EVEN MONEY.

Betting along Broadway is at even money. In spots Sharkey is a 6 to 5 favorite. Most wagers, however, have been placed at even money. When betting opened Maloney was an 8 to 5 choice. Sharkey's impressive showing in the gym has cut the price down. Maloney, on the other hand, never makes a flashy showing in the gym and this has tended to cause many persons who were undecided as to how to place their money to turn to Sharkey.

Meyer Boston, who places most of the big betting commissions, and who is associated with Arnold Rothstein, today put $5,000 on Sharkey at even money.

Jimmy Kelley, manager of Babe Herman, says he has $6,000 which he wants to bet on Sharkey. He plans to bet $3,500 that Sharkey will win and $2,500 more that Jack scores a knockout. Kelley is asking a price of 4 to 1 on the knockout bet.

The real big betting will not start until next week when the Boston money begins to arrive. It is expected that most of the Boston money will ride on Maloney.

BOWEN LIKES JIM.

I met Pat Bowen of Boston on Broadway the other day and he told me he was going to place a few hundred iron men on Maloney.

"You know, Jack, I've always loved the Irish," said Pat.

Tex Rickard declared today that the ticket rush has started and that he is confident that the sale will pass the $400,000 mark. Tex expects to pull $100,000 out of New England alone.

It is now impossible to buy a ticket within the first 20 rows. I met Joe Jacobs, manager of Johnny Dundee, on Broadway in a mad scramble to get a couple of voice seats. Joe said he was going to make a direct appeal to Rickard as none of the agencies had any seats within the first 20 rows.

Dan Carroll told me that he was placing his family in the $11 seats in the second tier of the grandstand.

"I think the second tier of the grandstand offers a fine view of the ring," said Dan. "Nobody can pop up and obstruct your view."

The heavy sale has been in the $13 and $11 sections. It is expected that the drive for the $5 and $7 tickets will start next week.

There will not be any activity around Sharkey's camp today.

Jack will take the day off, and will probably take in a show so as to get his mind off the coming battle. Sharkey will not do any [illegible] Saturday morning, but [illegible] in the Gym Saturday afternoon for the last of the training grind which will end on Tuesday.

In Sharkey's case he is already in good condition. All he has to do between now and next Thursday night is to guard against going stale.

Nutrition Found in Dishes That Aid Budget

By MARTHA LEE

PENNY wise we must be these days if we are to beat old H. C. L. at his own game. The question is WHERE can economies be most wisely practised? In careful buying of clothing, certainly; in house rent and entertainment and, if WISELY practised, on our tables.

The human machine can't run well on inferior fuel, but neither does it require the choicest meat cuts to keep it hitting on all six.

I've prepared today's recipes with Mr. Budget's teachings hand in hand with fine flavor and nutrition.

First, I want to tell you about a delicious combination of ham and macaroni scalloped. With the addition of green salad it contains all the elements necessary for a well-balanced meal.

Scalloped Ham and Macaroni—Eighteen sticks macaroni, one cup minced ham, two level tablespoons butter, one level tablespoon flour, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, three level tablespoons grated cheese, one-half cup stale breadcrumbs, one level tablespoon butter, one cup milk.

Break the macaroni into short lengths and cook it in boiling salted water till tender, which will probably take about thirty minutes. Make a sauce by blending the butter and flour smoothly, adding the milk and stirring till the mixture boils, then add the pepper but no salt as the ham will sufficiently salt the mixture.

Grease a baking dish and place in it alternate layers of macaroni, ham and sauce, sprinkling a little of [illegible] over each layer of the macaroni.

[illegible] tablespoon of butter [illegible] and [illegible] the butter. Spread over the ingredients in the dish [illegible] brown.

Meat Fritters—One cup finely chopped [illegible] meat—beef, lamb or chicken [illegible] and a little [illegible] other flavoring [illegible] one cup flour, one [illegible] baking powder, one cup milk, frying fat.

Season meat to taste, varying the seasoning according to the kind of meat. For chicken a little lemon rind may be added and for lamb a little finely-chopped mint; add parsley in either case. Make a batter with the flour, baking powder, egg and milk, to which add the seasoned meat and drop by spoonfuls into the hot fat. Fry golden brown and drain well. Serve hot with or without a sauce or gravy.

Cheese Toast—Two level tablespoons butter, three level tablespoons flour, salt and cayenne, one cup milk, one cup grated cheese, [illegible] toast.

Make the toast first and keep it hot while preparing the sauce. Melt the butter, add the flour and blend smoothly; season and put in the milk a little at a time, stirring constantly. After cooking five minutes put in the cheese and when melted pour over the toast and place in a hot oven for five minutes before serving. A cup of thick stewed tomatoes can be added for a change.

Beef Rolls—One and one-half pounds very thin round steak, one-third cup rice, one tablespoon chopped parsley, a pinch of sweet herbs, one slice of onion, minced, three level tablespoons beef drippings, two level tablespoons flour, salt and pepper to taste, one-half cup stoned olives, one pint water or stock. Cut the meat into pieces about four inches square, chop the trimmings and add to the rice, parsley, herbs, onion and seasonings to form a stuffing.

Put a spoonful of this mixture on each slice of meat, roll up and tie firmly. Heat the drippings and cook the rolls in them till brown; then remove from the pan, add the flour, mix smoothly and put in the water or stock, whichever is being used.

Stir till boiling, replace the meat and cook very gently one and one half hours. Five minutes before serving add the olives. Remove the strings from the meat before dishing.

Pot Roast of Beef—Four pounds top sirloin of beef, two level tablespoons of flour, one cup water. Seasoning. Onions, carrots and turnips. Three level tablespoons drippings or other fat.

Have the meat cut in a thick compact piece. If necessary, tie and skewer so that it will keep its shape.

Melt the drippings in a saucepan (an old-fashioned, round bottom "Scotch bowl" is the best), and brown the meat on all sides, put in a deep casserole or covered kettle and cover closely. Add one cup boiling water.

Bake as gently as possible for two hours; then season, and add the vegetables scraped or peeled as they need, and cut into pieces. Bake till the vegetables are tender; then remove the meat and vegetables from the pan and thicken the gravy with the flour mixed smoothly with a little cold water.

If necessary add more water while the roast is cooking that there may be sufficient gravy.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

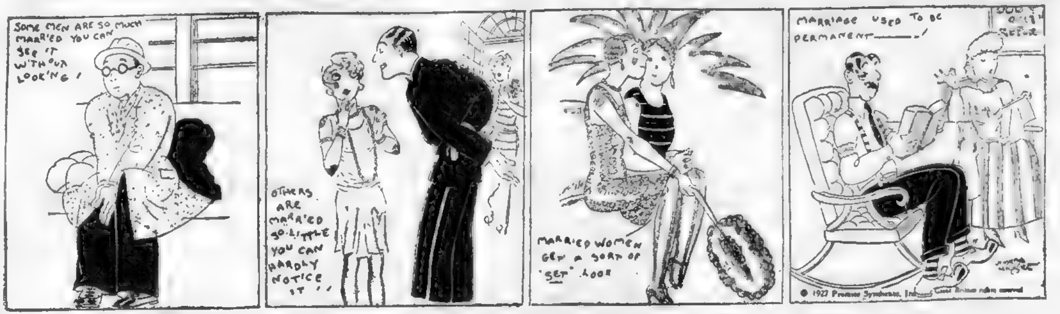
On That Set Married Look

By Marceline d'Alroy



SOME MEN ARE SO MUCH MARRIED YOU CAN SEE IT WITHOUT LOOKING!
OTHERS ARE MARRIED SO LITTLE YOU CAN HARDLY NOTICE IT!
MARRIED WOMEN GET A SORT OF "SET" LOOK MARRIAGE USED TO BE PERMANENT——!

SOME MEN are so terribly "much married"
That you can SEE it without looking.
Others are MARRIED so little you can Hardly NOTICE it—even close up.

There is a DEFINITE married LOOK, and you can't GET AWAY from it. Men show it in the FACE,
But most WOMEN show it more in the

MARRIAGE now is not what it USED to be.
It is not nearly so DEADLY.
Of course, people still COURT DISASTER,
And many manage to ENJOY it.

MARRIAGE, like DEATH, used to be permanent.
Now it is often as PERMANENT as a WAVE.
Of course, DIVORCE ends "many troubles,"
But it often STARTS NEW ones.

Love Confers No Right to Nag

By Beatrice Fairfax

"MY MAN!" These two words are the proudest in the language when uttered by a woman who is truly, deeply in love and whose love is fully reciprocated.

The only phrase of equal tenderness and joy is "My girl!"

Yet this possessive phrase, "My man!" is often misused.

"He's my man!" declared a young woman, defiantly, the other day. And she shot down the man who had been her lover and was giving her up, returning to his long-deserted wife and family.

Many a wife who nags and torments her husband with constant exhibitions of ill-temper and ugly disposition excuses herself with the idea that he belongs to her and she has the right to work off her tempers and grouches at home, keeping her smiles for "company" and strangers.

As a matter of fact, neither the marriage ceremony nor even love give any woman the right to use the possessive phrase, "My man." Love is not all that is to be considered in this world. There are often legal or ethical barriers that rightly separate a man and woman.

They have not a claim on each other merely because they love each other. It is only when a man and woman have every ethical and legal right to each other and there is suitability as well as a great, mutual love, making them real mates in every sense of the word, that they earn the right to that possessive phrase, "My man!" or "My girl!" Then it becomes rich with meaning and tenderness.

I have a friend who calls her husband, endeared to her by more than twenty years of happy marriage, "Menna." She tells me the pet-name is derived from a German word which is the equivalent to our English phrase, "My man."

These two have shared sorrows and joys, hardships and success. They have worked together and played together and their love has proved its own enduring power.

There would be more such marriages if girls and young men studied themselves and each other carefully before marriage, instead of plunging into matrimony with the idea that divorce will furnish an easy way out of discomfort, in case the rose of love proves to have thorns.

Romantic elopements, sudden infatuations, marriages for a joke or on a dare end in disaster nine times out of ten.

Preventing Blindness in Adults

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.

THE preservation of your own eyesight depends upon the avoidance of many factors that cause blindness in adults.

I have space in this article briefly to call your attention to only a few of these danger signals. Thus, a serious factor in the production of blindness after middle life is a disease known as a glaucoma. This is due to an increase of pressure inside the eyeball. It accounts for thirty per cent. of the cases in homes for the aged blind.

If the disease is recognized early and treated on the right lines it can nearly always be cured, but if a wrong diagnosis is made at first and it is mistaken for any other eye disease, it is apt to end disastrously.

Glaucoma often begins with transient sensations of having a cloud before the eyes, feeling of discomfort and neuralgic headaches. This may go on for months or years.

When an acute attack of glaucoma begins, there is intense pain over the eye and face, so serious sometimes that it may lead to vomiting, and the condition may even be mistaken for a bad bilious attack.

In a few hours the sight is seriously impaired and there is some swelling and congestion of the lids and eyeball. When this occurs, the eye should be submitted at once to an opthalmic surgeon, as it demands immediate and energetic treatment and careful watching.

The chronic form may come on very insidiously and be very difficult to diagnose. The general rule of having the eyes examined every three or four years during youth and middle age by an opthalmic surgeon would prevent any danger of glaucoma developing unrecognized.

Some industrial conditions may cause blindness, either by disease or accident. Workers in lead, benzine derivatives, glass and iron should pay particular attention to their eyes.

Blindness was due to industrial accidents in 7.2 per cent. of cases in a certain English series, and there is enormous economic loss from relatively minor accidents, such as particles flying into the eye. These things could be almost entirely prevented by the use of proper safeguards, such as screens and goggles.

Eyes are so closely linked together that one is very likely to get diseased or inflamed if the other is sick or injured, and all serious wounds of one eye should be carefully watched by an opthalmic surgeon for this reason. Cataract, as is well known, is liable to affect the eyes of elderly people.

Cataract is an opacity in the glass-like lens in the eyeball. It is usually heralded by the appearance of black specks in front of the eye. These remain stationary, unlike the jumping black specks of other eye diseases. Sometimes the eye sees several images of each object particularly in the evening, when bright lights are about.

Correct Manners Explained

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN,

You give such good advice to other readers that I, too, should like you to help me.

1. Is it permissible to send a wedding present to a young man who was married last month and from whom I never received an announcement?

2. Will a card of congratulations be sufficient or is it too late for that?

3. If so, to whom should I send the card as I am not acquainted with his bride, and they live in another city?

PERPLEXED.

IN answer to all three of your questions, I doubt if I would send a present or a note of best wishes yet, if I were you. Apparently they are waiting to make the announcement of their wedding in their own way later—maybe by a reception or something of the kind—and when they do make the announcement, you can make some gesture of congratulation.

In any event don't send a card of congratulation or best wishes, for these, under all circumstances, are banned by good taste and good form. Nor should you send a present to the young man. The present should be sent, before the wedding, to the bride (whether or not you know her), and after the wedding, addressed to the couple, or to the bride. Never to the groom only.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have tickets to a dance, and would like to invite a boy who is in my class at school. He has never taken me out, but always treated me nicely. I don't think he likes me, except as a good friend. Would it be all right if I asked him to go? Thank you. UNDECIDED.

YES. But ask him through a note rather than orally. If there is any question of his wishing to go, then this form of invitation makes it easier for him to accept or decline, as he wishes.

Marriage Customs

THE domain of the Shans occupies the whole of Northern Siam and a portion of East Burma. They belong to the Siamese race proper, as they are all members of the Tai ("free" or noble") race.

Among the Western Shans, marriage is a very simple affair. As a rule the young people merely eat rice together out of the same dish in the presence of their relatives and the village elders, and the bridegroom then declares that he marries the girl and will support her. Among the Eastern Shans, however, there is more ceremony on the wedding day. A feast is held to which all the relatives and many friends are invited. Liquor flows freely on these occasions. Early in the afternoon the bridegroom is taken to the bride's house, accompanied by the relatives and friends. As the procession advances it finds its way obstructed at certain points by ropes, at each of which the bridegroom has to pay toll. Arriving at the bride's house, the bridegroom takes his place beside her, and their hands are tied together by a piece of string; they eat together and an old man pronounces them man and wife. Meanwhile, the guests amuse themselves by throwing balls of rice at each other and at the happy couple.

The burial customs of the Shans are also very interesting. When a person dies, the corpse is washed, dressed in a new suit, and some money is put into the mouth. This passage money is considered to be necessary in order to prevent any hindrance to the transmigration of the soul. The priests recite prayers over the dead body daily, until the day of the funeral, when the corpse is carried out in a coffin highly decorated with colored paper and tinsel, under a gaudy canopy.

The eldest son heads the procession with a naked sword in his hand in order to clear the way, which is supposed to be barred by evil spirits. The relations dance as they go along. Presents for the priests are carried to the grave. There the closest relatives go in procession around the coffin carrying lighted candles as a last sign of respect for the dead; the priests then recite a few prayers and the body is buried.

Priests and chiefs are burned instead of buried, for burning is considered more honorable.

Forbidden Lips

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON
AUTHOR OF "THE TAXI DANCER"

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

CHAPTER 34.

"We're going to get down to business." Jacqueline repeated the words after Julius Lupino. "What do you mean by that?"

A terrifying fear was in her bosom that he was playing her false. The strained look on his face lent color to her fear, but his words, instantly, reassured her.

"We've got to get out of here."

She flashed him a look of relief. "You meant what you said after all! I was afraid you didn't. But how can we get out? Mustn't we just wait until somebody comes and unlocks the door?"

"I was lying to you all the time about being unable to get out. It's a cinch."

The strain—the shock of the experience through which she had just passed, began rapidly to escape from Jacqueline in the great relief of her promised freedom. What did it matter now that Lupino could have effected their escape earlier?

"As long as I know you're going to keep your word to me, the actual getting out doesn't matter so much."

"You're wrong. Those fellows may have done something to bring on a police raid."

He walked to the door, and examined the lock, which was on the inside, carefully. "I thought so," he muttered. "A cinch."

From the bottom drawer of his desk, next to the floor, he took out a short piece of iron, bent at one end and flattened.

"Sometimes when we wanted to break open a case of stuff here in the office we used this," he explained.

With his gigantic strength it was but a few minutes until he had pried off the entire lock. The door swung easily, free and clear.

The captured feeling, as though she were still locked in a vault, was still upon Jacqueline; but the competent, confident manner of Lupino convinced her that all was well. He was putting on his hat and top-coat.

"When I built this place I figured that the vault door downstairs might accidentally go shut some time with the combination on and lock me in," he told her. "Or there might be a raid. I built an emergency exit. Come on."

As they passed down the stairs the house looked curiously empty, with all of the rooms open.

"Thirty thousand dollars' worth of merchandise carried away, and no chance to get a gallon of it back," he grumbled. "Everything went against me tonight—everything."

Jacqueline Obeyed Lupino Without Showing Fear

They were now on the first floor, and Lupino led her toward the back of the house into a room which, at some other period in the building's history, had been the kitchen. A kitchen sink and remnants of plumbing still survived; the cook-stove range was gone; but insecurely tacked to the floor, close to the side wall, was the square of zinc on which it had stood. Lupino bent over and ripped this away, disclosing a trap door which he pulled up; a short ladder leading downward was visible.

"You first. I'll follow and put the trap back—although it doesn't matter."

Without any fear now, Jacqueline obeyed him.

"The basement is four feet narrower than this floor," Lupino explained. "That gives us a leeway outside the concrete wall for the out."

For a moment they were in the dank darkness, but Lupino struck a match and pushed forward on the outer wall; a door swung open and they stepped through the opening into another room—into the house next door. Lupino closed the door behind him, and lighting matches led Jacqueline toward the front of this poorly furnished house by a short flight of stairs to the first floor, thence to the front door, where he loosened the spring lock.

"I control this house, too," he said. "It weakens the strength of the warehouse, but there's got to be a weak link in every chain."

The cool night air fanned in Jacqueline's face, and she tingled in her lungs, clear through her being, with the delicious sense of freedom.

"We'll get away from here in a hurry," Lupino told her. "It might not be safe to linger even for a minute in the neighborhood. We must pick up a taxi."

She was weak, the strength was drained out of her nervous system; but the sensation of escape was so intoxicating that she was able to hurry along at Lupino's side—to find even a feeling of protection, in this remote neighborhood, in his company.

"I kept my word with you tonight," he told her. "Now I want you to give me a promise and keep it. I realize that you don't owe me a thing in the world, but I believe you will do me this favor."

"What is it?"

"I want you to promise me that you'll never tell a living soul about this place of mine, or what happened there tonight."

A flush of shame crept over Jacqueline's cheeks, and she realized that despite her innocence she, of her own accord, could never bear to repeat what she had gone through.

"I promise," she said in a low voice. "I'll never breathe a word."

"I Thought You Were Lying," Jacqueline Said to Him

Just now, as her excitement began to ebb, she was struck by a growing, curious astonishment that Julius Lupino, the incarnation of all evil, had possessed an unsuspected streak of honor that had kept him faithful to his promise to release her unharmed. The realization grew upon her that she was unable to understand this man—that he was too complex.

"I thought you were lying back there, when you promised to let me get away. I didn't realize that a man like you could keep his word of honor," she said involuntarily.

"I always keep my word," Lupino told her. "I'm going to put you in a taxicab and send you home just like I promised. I told you that if you gave me that knife I'd let you go free. But that doesn't mean that I don't want you, Jacqueline, more than ever now, a hundred times more. Maybe I can't have you—I can't buck civilization complete, but I'm going to make you another promise—maybe you'll think it a threat—I promise you this: If I can't have you, nobody else can. I'm built that way. They could take every cent I've got in the world, and I wouldn't turn a hair—but nobody gets the woman I love. You ought to know that when I make a pledge I keep it. Well, I pledge you that—if I can't have you, nobody else can, either."

But his words lost any deep meaning with Jacqueline at the moment, because already her heart was beginning to lighten as the realization grew deeper that she had escaped a catastrophe that would have wrecked body and soul. The nervous shock, the reaction had not yet come; she was buoyed up with an artificial, unnatural lightness of spirit.

"You're through at the Sea Shell, I suppose?" Lupino asked her regretfully.

"Forever!" she answered with a thrill in her voice.

A taxicab wheeled up to the curb, and Lupino put her inside with his hat in his hand.

"If I can't have you nobody else can, either," he repeated to her in a low voice just before he closed the door on her.

Tomorrow—Jacqueline sends a cry for help to Tom Ware.

Imagination an Aid

By LUCY LOWELL.

"USE your imagination" is the advice of Otto H. Khan, financier and philanthropist, gives to young men wishing to make a success in life.

"What's the use of that?" a young friend of mine objects. "Imagination is all right for artists and writers, but what good is it to the ordinary worker?"

It is to the ordinary worker the difference between remaining ordinary and becoming extraordinary, the difference between plodding and climbing.

Imagination is the power to visualize; the ability to see what may be in the place of what is.

Imagination is the capacity for seeing ideas as tangible things. And this is as it should be, for every great or beautiful thing was an idea deep in someone's mind before it materialized for the world to see.

Another piece of advice Mr. Kahn gives the would-be successful youth is this: "Meet your fellow men frankly and fairly. You don't have to go through business armed to the teeth. If you are successful, be patient, courteous and conciliatory."

There is a mistaken notion among some that only the [illegible] [illegible] "Be aggressive" is the watchword.

Aggression is a good thing if it means alertness, the dare-and-do spirit.

But pugnacious assertiveness never won anything which lasted. Truculence may force a way for itself in small things, but it never is convincing.

Success is won through the faith and friendliness of those one has to deal with, never by trying to impress them with unmannerliness or shows of temper.

And, of course, it is the man who believes in himself and his powers of attainment who can afford to be patient, courteous and conciliatory. When you meet one who shows none of these things toward others, you know that he is trying to cover some weakness in himself.

The Red Signal — Manton's Murderer — By Homer Banks

HELEN'S TRIAL OPENS—The trial opened with the city at its highest pitch of interest. Ample precautions had been taken by court attendants to handle the crowds. Roger, who had been worried and strangely silent during the preparation of the defense, had suddenly assumed a puzzling, lackadaisical air. He did not see Rosalind until Adelaide brought her to court on the fourth day. Newspapers had heralded her appearance on the witness stand. A tense audience greeted her as she stepped through the door.

A DRAMATIC INTERRUPTION—Rosalind paused for a moment, her confused eyes sweeping over the sea of faces. She was trembling violently and Adelaide, who was following her, reached out to support her. Her vision cleared and her eyes dwelt on the tragic figure of Helen, seated beside Roger. With a glad cry of recognition she rushed forward. Roger leaped to his feet to stop her, but strong arms already had restrained her and were leading her to the witness stand.

ROSALIND ON THE WITNESS STAND—Helen's gaze followed the girl hungrily, but she turned resolutely away when Rosalind ascended the witness stand and faced the crowded courtroom. She told her story briefly, [illegible] wedding plans, of how, on the night of the ceremony, she had heard the report of the mysterious pistol shot while she was in another room. The story went un[illegible] the District Attorney suddenly excused her. Why was she released so soon?

ROGER'S SECRET REVEALED—A whispered comment went around the courtroom as Rosalind was led away. In the street a [illegible] paper. It was the first she had seen in weeks. Her face blanched. There, screaming from the front page, was the [illegible] her. Helen had admitted killing Manton. (Continued Tomorrow.)

'Shackled Souls'; Roen Is Impatient for Michael's Arrival

It was heavenly! Didn't you enjoy it, Dearie?"

Dearie's eyes rested plainly on her daughter. She had yielded to the shore vacation with quiet resignation. Jackie so [illegible] and all Winter long Roen saved and planned with mute, intensive yearning.

"Was it really hard on you, Dearie? I thought that gorgeous sea would make you glad again."

Tears shone over Dearie's smile. "It did make me glad to see you so excited—to see Jackie getting so tanned and strong."

"But glad for yourself. It would make him gladder, mother, if you could forget. Oh, I don't mean forget. I mean if you'd be gay. He always was—"

[illegible] Dearie's hand stole up and shielded her face. No sound came from her.

Roen felt saddened. This was never the farewell her father would have asked. Light-hearted as the brave most often are, he'd rather a hand waved gallantly; a whispered cheer sent after him across the unknown waters.

Why shouldn't Dearie [illegible] her the heart-brimming, holy years she had these. And a love to make the pulse leap—even a little [illegible] watching it. One should be grateful for the things he has to cherish. She flushed, thinking of Michael's kiss and his blue, pleasing eyes, younger and more shiny than the stars.

She hurried, giving a last, swift touch to the faded brocade on the table; to the andirons before the fireplace. Everything ready now. Only to run in and coil her flying hair.

She went calmly despite her bounding pulse. She even stopped to stack the magazines more neatly, pretending that nothing in the world, so far as she knew, was to happen.

Roen swallowed. Why [illegible] world need Evelyn Joyce [illegible] ing on this most momentous of Sundays! And most likely [illegible] stay and stay.

Evelyn was their cousin [illegible] Carrie's only daughter. She [illegible] and spen[illegible] her money on clothes. [illegible]

Ears Require Care

By Maria Jeritza.

THERE was a time, not long ago when ears were a comparatively unimportant feature of [illegible] beauty. But that time is past. Today, whether a woman wears her hair bobbed or merely combed close to her head in the sculptured effect now so fashionable, her ears are more or less visible.

With the coming of warm weather ears are likely to be more than ever in evidence, because nowadays women find ways of combining [illegible] with beauty. And there [illegible] the comfort of uncovered ears when the thermometer begins to soar.

If you start now giving your ears a little more than the usual care and attention you bestow on them by the time the really hot weather arrives they should be so exquisite in their shell-like perfection that you will be proud to wear your hair in a way that displays them.

Do you always include your ears in the cold-cream bath you give your face and neck at night? Are you careful when scrubbing them to cleanse them thoroughly [illegible] ting water into the [illegible] sages where it may harm the [illegible] organs of hearing? When you apply a refreshing tonic astringent to your face do you run it over [illegible] neck and ears as well? If [illegible] in the habit of following these [illegible] beauty measures no doubt your [illegible] are lovely.

Fashion Fads

Meeting Halfway, black satin and black kasha combine in developing some of the smartest coat models. Black monkey, beige or white ermine, or ombre lapin, are frequently selected to trim these wraps.

Setting the example for short and even shorter skirts, Paris is creating jeweled garters to match neck ornaments. No partiality is shown in the bedecking neck and knee—although it is but reasonable to suppose that the latter attracts more than its share of admiring attention.

Sheer Frocks and Women's Hygiene

New way safer—Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

THAT filmy gowns and women's oldest hygienic problem now go safely together is a fact millions of women are learning.

Old-time sanitary "pads" with their worries and dangers are giving way to the utter protection of a new way called Kotex.

✓ Kotex discards as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry, no embarrassment of disposal.

5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads," it permits one to dance, motor, go about for hours without a moment's doubt. Also deodorizes; thus ending all fear of offense.

Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "KOTEX." Box of 12 costs only a few cents. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

Hotel meals for kiddies are no problem for me

"When Jean eats away from home, I always give her Kellogg's Corn Flakes. I know how easy to digest they are—while Jean simply loves them!"

Kellogg's are ideal for kiddies—as millions of mothers know. They're so crisp, so crunchy, so deliciously flavored. Have them for lunch or dinner as well as breakfast.

Serve with milk or cream. Extra good with honey, canned pears, prunes or bananas added. Sold by all grocers. Restaurants. Dining-cars.

Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Oven-fresh in the inner-sealed red-and-green package. Imitations cannot equal such wonder-flavor! Demand the genuine!

THERE is no waste in China! The intense economy of the Chinese farmer is his dominant characteristic. However his regularity is forced upon him, for the whole country is overcrowded, and each farmer has many mouths to feed. Indeed, one season's drought would cause famine to thousands of families which depend solely upon the products of their own little farms for sustenance.

The Chinese farmer is a most industrious man, and he early trains his family to follow his example. When they are scarcely old enough to toddle around his children and grandchildren are assigned their own particular tasks, and at a very early age they are taught to work in the fields.

Although the average family is very large, they have few comforts but live with only the barest necessities, their luxuries being few and far between, and often totally lacking. The Chinese farmhouses generally consist of three rooms built around a mud courtyard. There is the central kitchen, containing also the shelf for the kitchen god's shrine, and sometimes the tablets of the ancestors. Then there are one or two sleeping rooms, depending upon the size and comparative wealth of the family. In these the whole family sleep.

The animals generally kept are goats, valued for their skin, sheep for their flesh and wool and the inevitable black pig, while the smaller domestic animals and the poultry share the common living room with the rest of the family.

BIG MEN

By Richard G. Swarington

"I'M glad you let me come, Molly, if only for twenty minutes." Joe Hill stood tall and young, until the girl sat down before the fire, then he sat down too. "I'll try not to stay longer, but I have something to tell you which—"

"Again?" Molly Norris asked, smiling her own fleeting one-sided smile. When Joe wore that look of serious eagerness she always felt like mothering him, though he was a month older than herself. "You've already proposed six times, haven't you?"

"Seven." Joe grinned, but not joyously. His face burned, and he wished angrily that he could outgrow the habit of blushing when Molly looked at him that way. "Have to keep telling you I love you, but—"

"Why?" Molly reasoned. "Why disturb your feelings by vain repetitions?"

"Your eyes are the loveliest blue!" Joe gazed at them until Molly blushed in turn. Then he explained soberly. "I can't forget my love and have to keep telling you. But that isn't what I was going to—"

"What, then?" Faintly relieved, Molly glanced at the clock. "Hurry, it's only fifteen minutes until—"

"I wanted to tell you," said Joe rather grandly, "that my chance has come—my big chance! Uncle Jasper wants me to go to South America to install and manage a branch distributing plant for his mills."

"South America?" Molly's first surprise settled into grave attention. "Why should he send you so far away? He has plenty of other men—"

"Because," said Joe proudly, "he wants a man he can trust. I'll have to stay eighteen months before I can even come home for a visit. But on the salary he offers I could have enough money in that time to marry—"

"Don't!" The girl spoke so sharply that Joe was startled. Again she smiled her one-sided smile, but without mirth. She added musingly. "You're just twenty-one—eleven years younger than Jasper."

"Yes," exuberantly, "Jasper was thrown into a big job when he was young, and it made him the man he is today. He wants me to have the same sort of chance. If you'll wait for me—"

"Don't!" repeated Molly; and sat staring into the fire. It seemed to cost her an effort to look again at the other face lit by the flames. "Joe," she said slowly, "he's proposed to me, too—your uncle, Jasper—He's asked me to marry him. He's coming for his answer at eight."

Joe remained silent so long, she started to repeat what she had said, fearing he had not understood. But her words were not uttered. Joe stretched his hands towards the fire, rubbing them mechanically. She saw that they were trembling.

"Why—that's fine!" Joe mumbled, rising. His darkly ruddy face had turned a little gray. By the exertion of muscular effort he forced a smile. "Congratulations. You couldn't find a better husband than Jasper."

Molly watched him turn toward the door, wondering at the hurt in her throat. She had never pitied anyone so before; yet, she saw, his head was up. He did not ask nor want her pity.

"Joe!" Molly's quiet tone seemed to fill the room. "Joe, wait!" Joe waited, his head proudly erect; but he did not look at her.

The silence was broken by the ringing of the doorbell. In the hall they heard the quiet, respectful voice of the maid, followed by the musical voice of a man.

Joe stirred restlessly. "Jasper's all right," he muttered, "but I don't want to see him—now!"

"Wait, Joe!" Something in Molly's quiet words steadied him; made him square his shoulders grimly.

Jasper Hill opened the door and came into the room. Came naturally and as though he felt at home, without any appearance of aggressiveness. He was the kind of man who does what he wants to do simply and as a matter of course. A tall, powerfully built man in the full strength of his prime. His face, just then, wore a look of boyish eagerness.

"Molly——" Then he discovered Joe standing there, and paused.

Molly had risen. She was a head shorter than either of the men, but for the moment she seemed the dominant personality in the room.

"Jasper," she asked quietly, "are you sending Joe away to get rid of him on my account?"

Jasper Hill had eyes that saw deep into people's minds. He attempted no evasion. "It's a good job. Any of my men would be glad of the chance."

"You want your answer," Molly said slowly. "I can't marry you."

Then she moved over to Joe's side. "Joe?" Her voice was vibrant.

"No!" said Joe harshly. "No pity, please."

Molly's one-sided smile flashed out, wide and droll. Her eyes were luminous with compassion for both these blind creatures.

"Joe's a big man, Jasper," she told the elder. "He was willing to let me marry you—ready to step aside." Her smile grew wider, a little rueful. "And now he doesn't want me—just when he's taught me that I want him!"

Jasper watched her hand slip under Joe's arm. He sighed gently, as though he were very tired.

"Yes, Joe's a big man," he said slowly. "He's still welcome to that job or any other I can give him, and I mean that, lad."

Joe strode across the room to where firelight played shadowy over Molly's pretty features. He took her hand like a reverent thing, and kissed it tenderly.

"Do you mean, dear," he asked, "that you are throwing up your chance to marry my big, rich uncle—for me?"

"Of course, I am, stupid!" she declared naively. "I adore you and if Uncle will be really generous and let me go along on your expense account, we'll take that South American job—together!"

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

IN some of the big cities all the burglars are picking each other's pockets.

IT'S getting so that a hold-up man can't have a pedestrian to himself any more.

FOUR or five thugs work together and split him between them.

ONE yeggman got so hard up the other night that he had to rob a policeman.

HE didn't have enough money to meet the installments on his blackjack.

HE was three months behind in the payments on his burglar's tools.

FOR a while it looked as though he'd have to go to work until he could get on his feet again.

HE figured he could earn an honest living until something better turned up.

LAST year he got a job in an office and told his friends he was picking pockets so that they wouldn't start talking about him.

HE didn't want to lose their respect.

IN some cities there aren't enough pedestrians to go 'round.

ONE burglar would have lost money the other morning if he hadn't held up the patrol wagon.

HE says that when he gets enough dough he's going to New York and open a night club.

HE has three very influential friends there. Two taxicab drivers and a bootlegger.

THE hold-up business is getting harder every day. If a crook is lucky he'll get into Sing Sing or Joliet, but nine times out of ten he'll probably be acquitted and have to get out and shift for himself.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A MARRIED WOMAN---BY HELEN ROWLAND

YOU swear that you have loved me,
Since Nineteen twenty-five—
And vow, by all the planets,
That love is still alive!
But you have never TOLD me
By word or look or sign!
Well, you shall have my answer—
In Nineteen-twenty-nine!

According to the flapper, the difference between platonic friendship and love is just about two cocktails and a sip from a pocket-flask.

* * *

To a woman, marriage is a premeditated felicity; but a man must be in an awfully reckless mood to get any joy out of his own wedding!

When the doctor orders "a change and a rest" for a bachelor, it means that he must go away somewhere; but when he orders the same thing for a married man, it may merely mean that he must STAY AT HOME for a few evenings.

With a few quaint, old-fashioned souls, marriage is still chronic; but, with most of the younger set, nowadays, it appears to be merely intermittent.

* * *

When the caveman was peeved, he banged the door open and came in with a club; when the civilized man is peeved, he bangs the door shut and goes out to a club. But, then or now, married life is always "clubby!"

* * *

For a man to kiss a girl with his hat on was once considered a terrible faux pas; but now he seems to think that a woman should be flattered to be kissed by a man in any costume.

* * *

That boredom a man shows after the first few hundred kisses is merely the effect of the "law of diminishing returns," dear heart.

NUNGESSER'S FIRST BIG AIR TRIUMPH

only the most cunning strategy could get us out of that death trap. Machine guns on the ground had already begun to rattle and some of their lead came howling around the plane, clicking against its body, making a veritable sieve of it. Many of those messengers of the Grim Reaper cut and gashed us. The wonder was that none reached a vital spot.

AIR STRATEGY

Ponchon was a brave man, but with the idea of being shot to pieces without a chance to defend himself rather unnerved him for a while, although he did not say anything, I could see it in his face.

We were both covered with blood that poured from our wounds, which, added to the soot of our exhausts, made us look terrible.

A violent fit of rage over-powered me and I uttered a suppressed oath and tore the jammed rudder line out of its snarl. Then I began a swift series of movements, intended to dodge the shots fired at us, for the larger calibre guns had also begun to bark and send their explosives in our direction.

I shouted to warn Ponchon that we were about to loop, and the next instant I pulled the plane up, curving into the air in a huge circle. As we reached the top of it we were, of course, hanging head downward from the cockpit and the ground several thousand feet below us. But the straps across our abdomens held and we quickly came down on an even keel.

CONFUSED THE GUNNERS

This maneuvre carried us out of range of the shots and we darted off to the Westward, until another volley came up, but fell short. To avoid more shelling, I sent the plane into a hairpin turn, made a side slip and went veering off on first one wing, then the other.

It was all accomplished as fast as I could work the plane, and it was all that saved us from being blown to fragments.

I kept the machine doing these acrobatic stunts as long as possible, to avoid the searchlights and bombs, and for a while it succeeded. But the searchlights found us again, when I suddenly thought of the dangerous expedient of dropping straight down in one of the rays. Unluckily it dazzled my eyes so badly that I could not see, but it confused the gunners.

Then I yelled to Ponchon to let loose with the machine gun, but he could not depress the barrel enough.

I settled the matter by going into a nose dive. The plane began to revolve violently and Ponchon's shots were hurled to all points of the compass. Many, no doubt, struck their mark.

As we were swiftly getting too close to the ground, I leveled the plane and began to climb as fast as I could. But we had not mounted far before the trench rifles were booming and metal was tearing the plane and ripping our aching bodies in a dozen places.

(How Nungesser and Ponchon extricate themselves from their precarious position will be told tomorrow.)

HOME-BUILT THREE-FOOT CONE

The construction of a three-foot cone is so simple that there is no reason why every set owner should not have one. Of course large cone speakers can be purchased completely assembled but there is so much more enjoyment in constructing and operating one yourself that, aside from the enormous saving in cost, that many people prefer to buy the necessary parts and build their own body. Direct-drive and simplified constructions of unit prevent distortion.

Simplified construction and sturdy high grade materials seemed to be the best way to secure tonal quality and efficiency. By looking at the illustration of the unit, Fig. 1, you will notice that a straight bar tungsten steel magnet is employed in place of the usual horse-shoe type. The reason tungsten steel is used is because it can be more powerfully magnetized and has greater coercivity than other magnet steels. In other words it holds the magnetism indefinitely and the unit will never have to be remagnetized.

AT LAST real justice is due. Long enough have we read of the stupendous sums Jimmie Gallagher and other announcers get for hanging on.

We read about how great—in area as well as price—artists are paid $1,000 for yodeling a couple of songs.

* * *

Opera companies are broadcast. Singers, talkers, dancers, whistlers are radiated from studios. Pianists, news, alarm clock ticks and all kinds of novelties are paid excellent sums for what? Merely for standing in front of a thing that looks like a cigar box, but isn't. They would do it anyway, for nothing.

Atwater Kent gets his picture in the paper. Phillips Carlin gets a movie contract. Mary Lewis gets her breakfast in bed. But what does the public get?

We get time ticks. We are told how beneficial "Wrecks" is for washing socks. We are told how grateful we should be. But listeners receive no wages.

Listeners are slowly coming to understand how the monopolistic trust is grinding radio fans down into the dark insides of loud speakers.

Without listeners, where would radio be? In this lies the strength of the millions of bedside listeners.

Let us make our demands now or never. Five dollars an hour would at least put us on par with the auto surgeons.

If listeners are paid, radio audiences will grow in number until all the people in the census book will be listening.

AD CLUB HEAD PICTURES GAINS FROM REVIEW

The conclusion of the Prize Review of Current Advertising conducted by the Boston Evening American and sponsored by the Advertising Club of Boston, has occasioned a wave of approval extending throughout New England and beyond.

Since the inception of the unique competition, the first of its kind to be conducted by any newspaper, the Advertising Club of Boston, led by their energetic and capable president, Major P. F. O'Keefe, has been intimately concerned in the success of this pioneering campaign to identify and reward good advertising.

MAJOR P. F. O'KEEFE

Major O'Keefe appointed the board of judges, five members of the Advertising Club, who devoted much of their time and thought to the competition during its six weeks course.

Major O'Keefe's statement reviewing and summing up the purpose of the review has a double significance because of his standing, both as an advertising expert and as a leader in civic and business improvement.

By Major P. F. O'KEEFE

The element of competition engendered by your Prize Review of Current Advertising in the Boston Evening American is one of the best ways of interesting people in advertising sufficiently to get them to give it more than passing attention.

While there is not the slightest doubt that everybody from the messenger boy to the bank president reads advertising almost as readily as news matter, and while the majority of the advertisements appearing in the daily press are so worded and illustrated as to make their meaning clear, nevertheless anything that tends to encourage an analysis of advertising or to study the relative merits of one advertisement as compared with another is bound to work to the benefit of buyer and seller alike, and to shorten the distance, figuratively speaking, between the two.

PRAISES REVIEW.

The fact that advertising in many instances is the only means a manufacturer or a merchant can command to inform the public of the existence of his goods, and in quite as many instances the quickest and most convenient way a consumer has of learning of the existence of something, should be a sufficient reason for a better understanding of it by all, and I congratulate the Boston Evening American upon having taken such an excellent way of fostering that understanding.

Naturally, as an advertising man, I am very much interested in anything that puts advertising men on their mettle for that, more than anything else, will have a tendency to increase the effectiveness of this form of selling.

As president of the Advertising Club of Boston, I am glad that our organization had an opportunity to co-operate with the Boston Evening American in this Prize Review.

WILL AID BUSINESS.

We are organized with a single purpose in view, and that is to arouse more interest in advertising on the part of New England manufacturers by showing them what can be accomplished through the medium of advertising, and what has been accomplished by the large national advertisers in other sections of the country.

When we can cause New England manufacturers to realize the possibilities of advertising, I believe we will have gone a long way towards solving some of the so-called New England business problems.

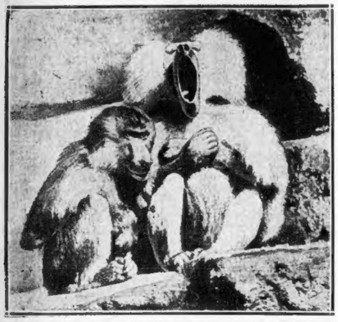
A "Make-Believe" Yawn

This Baboon Says "Come and Get Her"



CHAMPION BABOON PRETENDING TO YAWN

Back of this picture there is an interesting story of our alleged distant relatives, the baboons. London's Zoological Garden, admirably planned, has a great outdoor space especially planned for the fierce baboons.

You see a lady and gentleman baboon here, the gentleman yawning.

The baboon apartment house has many ledges, pleasant, cool caverns, unlimited sunshine. Many of the British poor that live in Whitechapel slums, if they went to the Zoo, might wish that Providence had made them baboons instead of making them subjects of His Majesty King George.

That, however, is another story.

This picture was taken after a great battle in the baboon camp.

All the baboons living in the baboon apartment house, as it happened, at a certain time were male baboons with powerful teeth. They lived happily, like Adam, before Eve and the snake arrived. Then some careless naturalist, who had charge of the baboon quarters, thought it would be a good idea to turn in a FEMALE baboon. You see her here, with her mouth appropriately shut, leaning against her yawning mate.

That human zoologist should have known better, being a man and acquainted to some extent with the monkey mind. Thoughtlessly he pushed the lady baboon out of the box that brought her from her native wilds, through the gate and into the baboon camp of gentleman baboons ONLY.

Immediately followed a most terrific battle. The male baboons bit, clawed and fought, "showing off" before the charming lady, each anxious to appropriate her for himself.

The belief among monkeys, as among men, is that "it is not a good thing for man to live alone."

Some baboons were killed, many were injured. Guardians of the baboon department could do nothing to stop the terrific battle. And as for the lady baboon, who may respectfully be compared to Helen of Troy, she sat on a high spot with downcast eyes and watched the fight.

When it was over she snuggled up, as you can see her here, to the baboon that WON. Moral: WIN.

There is nothing more to tell you about this; you will do your own moralising on men and monkeys. But you will be glad to hear that this is not AN IMPOLITE BABOON. He isn't YAWNING, as some husbands do because their wives, once they get them, no longer interest them. Quite the contrary.

This is what naturalists call the baboon's "STRATEGIC yawn." He pretends to be bored, tired and absent-minded, but he is looking around under his nearly closed eyelids to see if any other male baboon has any "fight" left in him.

Let another baboon approach stealthily and try to steal the lady in this picture and you will see this pretended yawn end abruptly. The big mouth will close, the lips will be drawn back from the big "canine" teeth, and the intruder will soon have all the fight he wants, and more.

Thus in some of history's great battles you have seen the wise general pretend to retreat in order to draw the enemy toward him, then turn and vanquish.

The baboon yawns instead of retreating, that's HIS strategy.

Marry for Beauty

Certainly, Everyone Does

Professor Knight Dunlap, learned American psychologist, says "if all men would marry for beauty, a super-race would result." Professor Knight thinks his statement will be attacked by "moralists, intellectuals and some fellow scientists."

No cause for attack. Men have always married for beauty, and always will. The future race depends on what men CALL BEAUTIFUL.

A Hottentot savage marries a young girl, fed and deliberately fattened on camel's milk, with hips five feet wide and projecting hideously. He thinks she is beautiful. His children are Hottentots like himself.

An American mental Hottentot marries a girl because the Atlantic City test, or some other test, have proved that she has the face with the least possible expression and possesses the longest tapering legs.

A wise man married Nancy Hanks, because she was tall, courageous, sincere, and the result was Abraham Lincoln.

Marry for beauty by all means, but have brains enough to realise that the only real beauty is INTELLIGENCE.

That's what improves the race, as it improves everything else, from flying machines to submarines.

IMMIGRATION IS OF SEVERAL KINDS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE need of the United States is for more workers, more than power.

There is a disposition, however, originating among the workers' unions of the United States and manifested in Congress to limit the number of immigrants.

This, however, does not mean that there is no more immigration, no more workers coming into this country. There is immigration, but it is from the powers of the air. Those who come to us from another country supply hand power, but they take jobs from our workers. Labor power, however, that comes to us from the forces of nature increase our ability to work without at the same time competing with us in consumption.

During the last 100 years or so immigration from the powers of nature into the realm of mankind has been considerable. How many thousands of hands of workers and how many thousands of feet and muscles of horses and oxen have been displaced by steam and electricity?

Huge bins of grain and other merchandise are now being whisked over the country by the power of a steam locomotive where formerly it had to be carried by man and horse power. Millions of people are carried from one place to another by automobiles and trolley cars, by the sprites of gasoline and electricity which have taken the place of the cruder forms.

And now comes Frank G. Baum, of San Francisco, who after six years of experiment declares that a startling superpower development is possible by his device known as the "synchronizing condenser and regulator."

It is claimed that it solves the question of transmitting economically large amounts of electric power over great distances. It is said that it eliminates distance as a barrier in power and light transmission, that it increases the capacity of the amounts of power and light transmissible, and that by it just as much power reaches the destination as starts from the generating plant.

If this is so it means that our numerous power resources in water falls and elsewhere can be utilized in bringing power to every farmhouse in the country, and that the railroads will be electrified.

It is as though a million new workers moved in from the planet Mars, workers which are tireless and which are the abject slaves of man's intelligence.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

A DAY that's dull, a day that's long, with clouds so thick, so near; a day without a note of song or any hint of cheer. Yet with mid-morning comes a call, a whistle down the street that straightway changes clouds and all to aspects bright and sweet! The postman comes and when he blows that whistle, shrill and gay, his air is happy, for he knows he drives old care away. No telling what is in that bag he carries on his back; he comes, and dull hours cease to drag, he bears a fairy's pack! His whistle makes glad fancies spring like flowers bright days unfold. Who knows what loved and lovely thing an envelope may hold? Oh, one may hear a word of cheer and one a message sweet; joy, hope, good wishes, all draw near, the postman on our street.

FISHING

ONE of the most ardent sportsmen on the bench, JUDGE ALBERT H. HAYDEN, is today in the wilds of Maine after the elusive trout. He plans to spend 10 days in the region near Lincoln, Me., and is expected to bring back some whoppers, both the speckled backs and stories.

MODEST

TOM FINNEGAN and his partner, OWEN McKENNA, two of the best-known Customs men in this part of the country, have scored again. Their capture of opium valued at $60,000 is the largest seizure of illicit drugs ever made here. Both men are so modest their feats are little heralded.

JOSHED

COUNCILLOR FRANCIS W. ALDRICH of Springfield, dirt farmer and one of the most peaceable men in the state, is undergoing some quiet joshing from his colleagues. It seems that when ALDRICH was elected chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs of the Council, a great, big, fierce, black sabre was presented to him. The sabre has rested ever since in a clothes locker, despite the efforts of other members of the council to get him to carry it.

DRESSY

When "HANDSOME JACK" steps out they all look. He's two steps and a couple of new pockets ahead of the Prince of Wales when it comes to style. Despite his sartorial accomplishments, JACK DORSEY is a pretty valuable member for any police department and one of the best detectives in the city's Bureau of Criminal Investigation.

CONTENDERS

Who holds the pugilistic championship at POLICE HEADQUARTERS? Some of the younger members of the department thought they were pretty good until they squared off with the "Super's" aides at the information desk in the first corridor. Everybody admits the championship lies between JERRY DOWNEY and PAT MALLEY. JERRY'S been in the department 52 years. PAT'S worn the uniform since 1888.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"SINGING Youth"—isn't it a lovely name?

The book's as lovely as the name. It is an anthology of children's poems, edited by Mabel Mountsier, published by Harpers and Brothers. The children range in age from four to eighteen.

Through these verses runs the fresh, clear call of Modern Youth.

Has that call jarred upon you sometimes? Have you harked back to the disciplined cadences of 1880 youth—the "good old days" when children were "supposed to be seen but not heard," and found nothing but impudent arrogance and lawlessness in this audacious new voice?

Then this book was meant for you.

Here is the song of the new world—a world where young people are working for themselves, facing an independence and carrying responsibilities of which their elders never dreamed. We see the blunders they make—we hear the noisy discord of their swift advance and the crash of the old traditions going down before them—but what lies behind all this noise and bluster?

This is what lies behind it. Read sixteen-year-old Edith Quinn's poem.

SIXTEEN.

What does life hold in store for me,
Poised on the brink of soon-to-be?
What shore, mine, in eternity?

I ask the graybeards, but they prate
Of some vague goddess they call Fate:
But I am young and cannot wait.

And so, I am impatient grown—
A fig for Fate! I shall shape my own.
For the World's ahead, and I stand alone.

Edith Quinn (age 16).

I have never met Edith, but if she's like the rest of our sixteen-year-olds, she's probably a rambunctious handful. Cock-sure of herself. Given to telling her elders where "they can head in." And yet—

Here is the beautiful, flaming confidence that underlies that impudent young cock-sureness. Five years from now Edith will probably be a wife and mother. If she can keep that flame tall and clear, Edith will be the best kind of a wife and mother that the world has ever seen.

Then there's Erik—

He's another sixteen-year-old. Sure of himself. Doesn't need to be told. I'll wager that divers irate citizens have called him a "conceited young puppy" more than once. But listen—

I DO NOT ASK THEE, GOD

I do not ask Thee, God, my steps to guide
Along the path of life, and show the way,
Or lead me back if I should go astray.
I ask Thee not to travel at my side,
To shield me from temptation or abide
With me and grant me strength in trouble.
Nay,
Permit me rather, God, I only pray,
To live this life myself, and to decide,
Myself whatever turns I'll take; to face
Each crisis as I can. Ah, let me use
This life, Thy gift to me, the way I choose,
And when my years are over, and I place
It at Thy feet again, then state Thy will.
Then judge if I have used it well or ill!

Erik Barnouw (age 16).

Yes, they even make bargains with God! But there's a truer religion in that fearless covenanting with Life than there was in a thousand shackling creeds. And, believe me, World, for all the impudence and conceit, our headstrong little Ediths and Eriks of today are the finest, fightingest bunch of youngsters that we humans ever hatched!
